Hindenburg Explodes With 97 Aboard; D. C. Man Escapes, 33 Die at Lakehurst

F.L. Belin, Jr., Leaps From Blazing Ship

Relatives Here Term His Jump to Safety a 'Miracle.'

Change in Orders Keeps Two Naval Officers From Flight.

The hand of fate intervened to save Washington from representation on the Hindenburg death list, it developed last night.

Ferdinand Lammot Belin, Jr., 24-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Lammot Belin, 1623 Twenty-eighth street northwest, and only District resident aboard the ill-fated ship, was among the few survivors.

When word of the youth's safety reached Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Mears, 2934 Edgevale terrace northwest, an uncle and aunt, Mrs. Mears said:

"It is a miracle."

Soon after reaching New York from the disaster scene, young Belin telephoned a description of his escape to the Yale News at New Haven, Conn., according to late dispatches.

With two stewards, the young man said, he leaped from a cabin window while the airship was 30 feet from the ground. He landed on a pile of sand and was unhurt.

He and his companions, Belin said, ran for some distance before looking back to see the great ship a mass of flames. Fifteen minutes later, Belin succeeded in finding his parents in the sobbing, hysterical crowd of spectators.

Assignments Changed.

And the Belins were kind to two naval officers—Lieut. Comdr. Francis W. Reichelderfer and Lieut. Richard N. Antrim (j.g.), both well known in Washington.

Both were scheduled to ride as observers aboard the Hindenburg on its flight from Germany, but a last-minute change switched their assignments to the return crossing.

Lieut. Comdr. Reichelderfer was stationed here in 1930 as an aerologist at the Navy Department. Lieut. Antrim, on duty here several years ago, was sent to Lakehurst last June.

When early reports listed Belin as among those killed, Dr. and Mrs. Mears waited anxiously at their telephone for word from his parents, who had gone to Lakehurst to meet him.

Their first knowledge of his safety came from a Post reporter. Later, a telegram from Belin's father, in New York, confirmed reports that Ferdinand, known to his friends as Peter, had been saved.

Father Minister to Poland.

Her voice choked with emotion, Mrs. Mears called The Post to tell the news. She said the Belins would return here today.

Ferdinand is the Belins' only child. His father, former Minister to Poland under President Hoover, has a distinguished record in the diplomatic service. His son was returning from a course of diplomatic studies in Paris.

Following his graduation from Yale last June, Belin went to Paris in October. He returned home for a brief vacation before continuing his studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Belin, it was reported last night, witnessed the air tragedy as they stood in the Lakehurst crowd waiting for the huge airship to land.

Hitler, Stunned, Refuses Comment On Airship's Loss

Berlin, (Friday), May 7 (U.P.).—Reichfuehrer Adolf Hitler was called from his bed early today to receive news of the worst disaster to German air transportation in history—the loss of the proud dirigible Hindenburg.

The dictator apparently was stunned by the news. He refused formal comment.

A report of the catastrophe was telephoned to the chancellor and Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels.

Others Near Death Given Last Rites

Last Rites Administered Capt. Lehmann; Blast Called 'Strange' by Air Official of New Jersey.

Inside The Post—

Disaster Stories, Pages 3, 6, 7, 22, 28.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 6.—Her silvery bulk shattered by a terrific explosion, the German airliner Hindenburg plunged in flames at the United States naval air station tonight.

Exactly how many died was still in dispute as the flames licked clean the twisted, telescoped skeleton of the airship that put out from Germany 76 hours before on its opening trip of the 1937 passenger season.

The American Zeppelin Company, through its press representative, Harry Bruno, placed the death toll at 33 of the 97 aboard. The company listed 20 of the 36 passengers and 44 of the 61-man crew as the disaster's survivors.

These figures were at slight variance with unofficial estimates of the number of dead.

Some Survivors Gravely Burned.

In the crowded hospitals in the communities neighboring this hamlet in the pine covered New Jersey coastal plain, many of the survivors were in critical condition, a number suffering from excruciating burns. Some were so grayly injured, among them Capt. Ernst Lehmann, that the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered to them. Lehmann, skipper of the ship's 1936 flights, made the ill-fated flight as an observer. Capt. Max Pruss, the commander, was listed among the injured survivors.

An explosion of the No. 2 gas cell toward the stern of the ship was named as the cause of the disaster by State Aviation Commissioner Gill Robb Wilson, who called the blast "strange." The highly inflammable hydrogen gas billowed into fierce flame as the explosion plummeted the ship to the airfield. Ground spectators said crew members in the stern of the ship "never had a chance" to escape.

The disaster struck without the least warning. The ship had angled her blunt nose toward the mooring mast, the spider-like landing lines had been snaked down and the ground crew had grasped the ropes from the nose, when the explosion roared out, scattering ground crew and spectators like frightened sheep.

Passengers Stunned.

The passengers, who were waving gaily a minute before, from the observation windows, were so stunned they could not describe later what happened. Some jumped to the sandy landing field along with members of the crew. Others seemed to have been pitched from the careening sky liner as it made its death plunge.

The heat drove back would-be rescuers, so it could not be determined for how many the Hindenburg made a burning tomb. Fire departments from nearby communities converged on the field and soon had streams of water playing on the broken airliner. The flames still enveloped the outline of the ship, apparently feeding on the fuel oil supply which the Hindenburg carried for her Diesel motors.

Somewhere in the glowing furnace were the two dogs, 340 pounds of mail and the baggage which she had aboard.

Wilson said there was "a hydrogen explosion in number two cell from the rear."

"There was something very strange about the explosion," he said. "The Hindenburg had stopped completely and was preparing to hitch when flames broke out from the rear.

"The only persons possibly saved were those who were in the engine gondolas.

"Those in the belly of the ship absolutely had no chance.

"In all my 21 years of flying experience I have seen crackups, explosions, flaming airplanes but nothing measures up to the explosion of the Hindenburg.

"I cannot be too loud in my praise of those Navy boys who dove into the flames like dogs after rabbits in their rescue.

"There will be investigations by the Federal Bureau of Air Commerce and the State of New Jersey.

"I repeat there was something strange that caused the tragedy."

Spectators shrieked and screamed as the explosion, apparently in the stern of the envelope, shattered the ship and she collapsed.

The ground crew of sailors, which had been standing by to help land the ship, scattered before the blinding flare of the explosion. One sailor later said he saw three bodies removed from the stern of the ship, all horribly burned beyond recognition.

Even after the first stunning explosion sent the ship crashing, additional blasts continued to rend the Hindenburg's silvery bulk as the spectators sobbed hysterically.

Hughes Appeals To Sentiment to Maintain Court

Chief Justice Addresses Law Institute; Replies to Roosevelt Plan.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Contending that the success of democratic institutions rested on "a competent and independent judiciary," Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes yesterday answered several of the arguments which have been projected in behalf of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization program.

Speaking before the American Law Institute, meeting in annual session here—the only occasion on which the Chief Justice speaks outside of his courtroom—Mr. Hughes did not refer specifically to the Roosevelt reorganization plan, but much that he said was applicable in that controversy.

Appealed to Country.

In effect, the Chief Justice appealed to the country to maintain unimpaired the integrity of its judiciary when he asserted the ultimate assurance of a firm and true administration of justice would be found not in statutes or forms, but "in the sentiment of a free people—themselves tolerant and reasonably and keenly alive to the necessity of maintaining the instrumentalities for the impartial determination of controversies."

Cheered though he was for this observation, the Chief Justice did not confine himself to generalities. As he did in his letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler several weeks ago, he demonstrated that the Supreme Court was current with its work; that the system of passing on petitions for certiorari or review of lower court decisions was necessary and that action of the court as a unit was advantageous. All these observations struck at contentions projected by the President or proponents of his scheme.

Court Up With Work.

For instance, the Chief Justice told his audience of approximately 1,000 law practitioners and teachers assembled in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom that once more his court was approaching the end of its term, having "heard all the cases that are ready for argument." He pointed out that a case filed as late as April 29—involving the social security act—already had been argued.

"There are no inordinate or unjustified delays in the Supreme Court," he said with emphasis, as his audience recalled the President's contentions about delays in the courts and that the Supreme Court was burdened and needed assistance.

Again, the Chief Justice defended the exercise of the high tribunal's discretion in consenting to review appeals—which was subjected to criticism by President Roosevelt. He asserted that "we are liberal in the application of our rules and certiorari (the writ for review) is always granted if four justices think it should be, and, not infrequently, when three, or even two, justices strongly urge the grant."

The Chief Justice contended that without the limitation on granting of writs of certiorari, authorized by Congress in 1925, "no court of last resort could possibly perform its essential function in this great country with its vast amount of litigation affecting merely private interests.

Limitation Works Well.

"This limitation upon jurisdiction," he added, "has worked well and the rules of the Supreme Court, and their administration, have been directed to the carrying out of the intent of the statute and have given to the limitation its just effect."

And then, as though addressing himself to the suggestion that a 15-justice Supreme Court might sit in divisions and thus speed up its work, the Chief Justice declared that the historic practice of the court sitting as a unit was "highly desirable" and resulted in "continuity of consideration and concentration of responsibility." He said the members of the court were "keenly conscious of the advantage which has been found to inhere in their historic method."

Finally, the Chief Justice, concluding his report on the work of the Supreme Court, swung into his peroration which contended that the judiciary was the foundation of democracy.

"The success of democratic institutions lies in the success of the processes of reason as opposed to the tyranny of force," he declared. "Between these society must choose. If society chooses the processes of reason, it must maintain the institutions which embody these processes. Institutions for the exercise of the law-making power and for the execution of laws must have their fitting complement in institutions for the interpretation and application of laws, for the safeguarding of individual rights, through a competent and independent judiciary.

People Will Determine.

"The firm and true administration of justice is thus the primary concern of civilized society. That administration must find its ultimate assurance, not in statutes or forms, but in the sentiment of a free people—themselves tolerant and reasonable and keenly alive to the necessity of maintaining the instrumentalities for the impartial determination of controversies."

The Chief Justice has made it a rule to speak outside of his courtroom only at the annual sessions of the American Law Institute, an organization of law specialists dedicated to studying trends in the legal field and restating the law in the light of recent decisions. Thus its sessions for the most part are of a technical nature, and the Chief Justice's address is the highlight from a popular viewpoint. The only exception which Chief Justice Hughes has made to his rule about speaking in public was several years ago when he went to Frederick, Md., to dedicate a memorial statue to the late Chief Justice Roger Brook Taney.

At the outset of his address yesterday the Chief Justice paid a glowing tribute to Elihu Root, the "grand old man of American law," who died several months ago. Root was a prominent figure in the affairs of the American Law Institute.

Little Activity on Hill.

The Chief Justice's address came at a time when the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has the President's reorganization program under consideration, was in recess. Little new regarding that subject developed on Capitol Hill during the day. Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), of California, an advocate of the President's plan, introduced an amendment to the pending bill and also a resolution which would amend the Constitution.

His amendment to the bill would strike out all reference to the age of the incumbent justices. It would provide for increasing the size of the Supreme Court to 15 members, without consideration of any other factors. His amendment to the Constitution would fix the size of the court at 15 members for 25 years, with Congress then having power to determine what the size should be. This amendment also would permit voluntary retirement on pensions of justices when reaching 70 years old and would make retirement compulsory at 75 years.

New Faces in Congress.

Rep. Harrington Knows Needs Of Iowa's Arid Farm Sections

Young Congressman Well-Acquainted With Drought-Beggared Areas; Believes in Permanent Program of Control.

By Liam Lenihan.

Western and Northwestern Iowa—round-faced Representative Vincent F. Harrington calls those parched areas "the outer fringe of the dust-bowl."

He was born there; represents its citizens in Congress; knows their needs. For, looking into the harried eyes of grizzled farmers back home he has seen crop failure, famine and drought. And he knows the effect the swirling gray-brown shrouds of dust borne in on a stiff dry wind from Oklahoma's panhandle has upon the livelihood of his people.

Not that his district has suffered like others situated in what was once called the "Bread Basket of America." His district escaped the black blizzards, but has felt their effects keenly and what is more, has seen the hot sun dry up its lakes, rivers and streams, kill its crops, beggar its people, while they prayed for rain.

Last year in his district there was a total crop failure. And to alleviate this distress, since last July, the Resettlement Administration has poured in $3,000,000 in loans; $1,300,000 within the last 2½ months.

Needless to say Representative Harrington has a deep-felt sympathy for the farmer. Iowa, his part of Iowa, at least, has known depression since 1920. And it is still two years behind the rest of the country that is slowly raising its head above despair.

But sympathy is not enough, as the Congressman too well knows. He is here to get action for his people. And he believes in a permanent program of planning as the only panacea for recurrent droughts and crop failures.

In his district alone 70 per cent of the soil is owned by absentee landlords. "Until that figure is reversed," he will tell you, "stop-gap farm tenancy legislation will be of naught."

Biographical sketch: Born in Sioux City, Iowa, 1903; attended local schools and Trinity College; was graduated from Notre Dame in June, 1925, where he was one of the "shock troops" of that institutions famed football squad. Instructor in history, economics and athletic director at the University of Portland 1926-1927, he came home to become vice president and general manager of Continental Mortgage Co., his father's firm. Member of the Iowa House of Representatives 1930-1932; member of the State Senate 1932-1936. Nominated for lieutenant governor in June of last year, he withdrew in August to accept the convention nomination for Congress. This was to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of former Representative Guy M. Gillette, who had received the convention nomination for the United States Senate, to succeed Louis Murphy, who had died.

Hull Campaigns For Trade Pact With Argentina

Law Now Makes Sanitation Pretext for Embargo, He Contends.

By William V. Nessly.

In vigorous language, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, following up his campaign for restoration and expansion of the nation's foreign trade, yesterday opened what was interpreted as a new drive for ratification of the sanitary convention with Argentina, signed two years ago but never acted on by the Senate.

At the same time he announced intention of this government to negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement with Czechoslovakia. Sixteen such agreements already have been put into effect.

On the sanitary treaty with Argentina, the Secretary of State addressed a letter to the Illinois State Veterinary Medical Association in reply to one announcing that organization's opposition to the treaty.

"Smoot-Hawleyism carried to its logical extreme of embargo protectionism," was Hull's characterization of the present law which establishes an absolute sanitary embargo against the whole of any country whenever foot-and-mouth disease or exposure to it is found in any part of the country. The proposed treaty would substitute embargoes on the zones affected, leaving outside the restrictions those sections in which the disease, or exposure to it does not exist.

Hitting at the present provision, written into the Smoot-Hawley tariff act, the Secretary said "the real purpose was to establish what amounted to an embargo tariff under the guise of sanitary regulation." Argentina "naturally took exception ot the manifest unfairness" of the provision, Hull wrote, and adopted a policy of "buy from those who buy from us." Before enactment of the Smoot-Hawley act, he said, our exports to Argentina were valued at $210,288,027. Last year the value had fallen to $56,910,088.

"Where is the gain to the United States in such figures—or to the American livestock industry?" Hull asked, adding "of course there is none, but, on the contrary, sheer loss. * * * This vast trade loss, with its adverse repercussions upon our whole domestic economy, is one of the unsolicited and untoward results of the rampant, embargo protectionism of which this sanitary provision was a mischievous manifestation."

The treaty, so far as Argentina is concerned, would have particular application to Patagonia, the southern portion of the country, which is held free from the foot and mouth disease. Patagonia, however, is not a cattle, but a sheep country, and Hull held that removal of the embargo there would not bring any significant increase in United States imports of lamb or mutton, particularly since this country is now on a small export basis in those commodities.

Yet, the Secretary said, there are "widespread and reckless assertions to the effect that adoption of the treaty would lead to a vast increase in imports of meat from Argentina, to the great detriment of the American livestock industry."

Hull added that "this treaty must not be confused in any way with the tariff. It has nothing to do with the tariff and would not tie our hands in any way in regard to tariff matters. * * * It would restore sanitary embargoes to their legitimate functions."

"The resort to subterfuge which takes place when sanitary regulation is used as a cloak for covert protectionism of the embargo type," was criticized in the letter.

"In view of all the circumstances," the Secretary wrote, "the opposition which it has been sought to stir up against this treaty is wholly unwarranted and unfair."

Secretary Hull's stand was in line with his recent opposition, before a House committee, to a proposed reduction in Cuba's quota of sugar imported into this country, because of the adverse effect it might have on the United States' foreign trade.

President Roosevelt on several occasions has expressed hope that the treaty would be ratified, but it still remains in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In announcing that a reciprocal trade treaty would be negotiated with Czechoslovakia, Secretary Hull called for suggestions, by June 6, as to products that should be considered.

The announcement said that recorded statistics of United States exports to Czechoslovakia are "very far from a true representation" since much of the trade passes through or is consigned directly to intermediate European ports, particularly Hamburg and Bremen. Statistics for 1935 give United States exports to Czechoslovakia as $3,24,000 and imports from that country as $21,410,000. However, Czechoslovakia's official figures give its imports from the United States as totaling $16,619,000 in 1935.

Control of Rail Empire Is Bad, Young Asserts

Tells Senators No Individual Should Have Such Power.

By Sidney Olson.

Less than 12 hours after he grasped control of the $3,000,000,000 railroad empire once owned by the late Van Sweringen brothers, of Cleveland, a slim young gray-haired Wall Street broker told the Senate Railway Finance Committee yesterday that he thought it "a bad thing for any individual to have such an amount of power as this."

"And to get that control for such a small amount of money—$254,295,92?" asked Chairman Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

"That's a bad thing, too," said the witness, Robert R. Young, who on Wednesday, with Frank F. Kolbe, his stock-exchange partner in New York, and Allan P. Kirby, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., son of a founder of the Woolworth chain, received control of the key blocks of securities in the tremendous Van Sweringen properties.

The trio had bought the controling securities of the Midamerica Corporation, topmost Van Sweringen holding company, from the little, gray-haired 74-year-old George A. Ball, the fruit-jar manufacturer, of Munice, Ind., who himself purchased the gigantic industrial domain from a group of New York bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., in the fall of 1935 for $274,682.

Explore Reason for Sale.

Yesterday Senator Wheeler and the sub-committee of the Interstate Commerce Committee began to explore the reasons for Ball's sale of the 23,000 miles of railroad track, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, the Pere Marquette Railroad, the Nickel Plate Railroad, the Erie Railroad and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad and the Missouri Pacific Railroad—and bus lines, street railways, grain elevators, grazing lands, coal companies, terminal and office buildings and a peach orchard.

Testimony began with Frank B. Bernard, Ball's representative and secretary-treasurer of the George and Francis Ball Foundation—the philanthropic institution which Ball founded a month ago and to which he transferred the controlling stock of the Midamerica Corporation.

Bernard, a short, stocky broker, self-passessed and smiling, was examined closely by Wheeler on both the functions of Midamerica, as related to its spreading interests, and the functions of Ball, in relation to Midamerica.

Wheeler introduced into the record a statement prepared by the committee from the corporation's books, showing Ball's book profits on his investment. Ball bought the Midamerica common stock for only $14,050. The book value of these shares, comprising 93.67 per cent of Midamerica's entire common stock on March 31 of this year was $10,137,147.50.

Wheeler said that this gave Ball a book profit of $10,123,097.50 on his Midamerica common, or a profit of more than 72,000 per cent.

GANGWAY FOR NEW RUM!

TRUCK'S DASH FROM PIER CULMINATES VIRGIN ISLANDS' 3-YEAR RECOVERY PLAN

FIRST SHIPMENT SOLD OUT weeks before it arrived. Many truckloads like this will be needed to catch up with the demand in each city. Never before has there been such keen interest in any liquor product.

Experts call Government House a first quality rum. Made direct from cane juice, it's mellow and full-bodied, has a special "extra" flavor. Not exactly like Cuban or Jamaican rums, it somewhat resembles the Cuban "gold" type. In the Islands they claim it should be sipped as a liqueur, it's so velvety. Certainly it makes a wonderful Daiquiri or Collins or Planter's Punch. Have you tried one yet?

But Government House Rum is much more than a beverage; it's the climax of a 3-year fight to make an American colony self-supporting.

LATEST TECHNIQUES and devices are used in the distillery at Christiansted, St. Croix, above—one reason why rum is so good.

"IT'S A PLEASURE to bring this rum to the mainland—I've seen the good it's doing for the Islands," says Capt. Mayo, of American Caribbean Line.

THE STORY BEHIND THE RUM

Soon after the U. S. bought the Virgin Islands in 1917, prohibition cut off the Islands' income from their 200-year-old art of making fine rum. Low point was 1930. Destitution was widespread. Something had to be done. It was. The Federal emergency relief organization stepped in to put the Islands on a self-supporting basis, formed the Virgin Islands Company. Idea was to stop the need for growing Federal subsidies and give work instead of charity. Private capital was invited to set up a large scale distillery—was invited for 3 years—wasn't interested. Out of necessity, a distillery was bought, started operations in 1934. The idle of the Islands were called off relief rolls onto payrolls at honest work. The rum they've been making is called Government House, as fine a rum as distilling science can produce.

Kirkwood 'Married' Mary Miles Minter, Her Sister Testifies

Fitts Discounts Importance in Taylor's Death

Screen Idol Took Girl for Wife 'in Sight of God,' Lawyer Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 6.—Dramatically, the name of James Kirkwood, movie idol of the silent screen, bobbed up today in a revived investigation of Hollywood's No. 1 murder mystery—the 15-year-old slaying of Ace Director William Desmond Taylor—but District Attorney Buron Fitts quickly discounted its significance.

The first witness before the county grand jury inquiring into the director's death was Mrs. Margaret Fillmore, sister of Mary Miles Minter, Taylor's sweetheart and a blossoming screen star when Kirkwood was a leading man.

Fitts disclosed that Mrs. Fillmore told the jury of a love affair between Kirkwood and her sister while both worked on the same studio lot, and related details of a "marriage ceremony" between the couple.

Actor Not Implicated.

Kirkwood now is in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Fitts said he had taken no step toward asking authorities there to question him, saying:

"Kirkwood is not implicated or involved in the case."

From Eugene Marcus, a lawyer, came the story of the affair between his client, Miss Minter, and Kirkwood.

It was in 1916, he said, when Miss Minter was but 15 years old. She and Kirkwood motored to Santa Barbara and strolled together through the fields.

Kirkwood placed Miss Minter on a rock, knelt before her, said Marcus, and said:

"I James, take you, Mary, for my wife in the sight of God."

Summoned before the grand jury here were Miss Minter, her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, and Mrs. Shelby's estranged daughter, Mrs. Fillmore.

Two of Miss Minter's diaries, unearthed by detectives who she said ransacked her home during her absence last night, were presented for examination today.

Diaries Are Mentioned.

Two statements by Mrs. Fillmore, given under oath, re-opened police files on the 15-year-old mystery. They were:

"I protected her (Mrs. Shelby) against the Taylor murder case.

"I did it to give her (Miss Minter) two diaries that were so diabolical and so pathetic that they made Mary Astor's diary look like a postcript."

These answers by Mrs. Fillmore were given in a deposition for a civil suit she has brought against her mother. Mrs. Fillmore asks return of $48,000 in cash allegedly taken by her mother.

So today the three women appeared in the corridor outside the grand jury room. Mrs. Shelby and Miss Minter greeted each other affectionately. Each attempted without success to speak to Mrs. Fillmore.

"Hello, my Margaret," Mrs. Shelby said as Mrs. Fillmore passed close to her. The mother tried to take her daughter's arm. Mrs. Fillmore jerked it away, and did not reply. She appeared not to notice her sister.

Mrs. Fillmore was questioned for two hours by the grand jurors. It was a secret session. Mrs. Shelby and Miss Minter, each with a different attorney, waited impatiently outside.

Mrs. Fillmore Hysterical.

When Mrs. Fillmore was excused for the noon recess, she was weeping and excited. Her lawyer whisked her away, angrily silencing all questioners.

Miss Minter, who has gained weight without losing any of the beauty she had 15 years ago when she was a star, said her diaries were of no importance to the Taylor case. Fitts agreed with her.

"Yes, they mentioned William Desmond Taylor," she said.

"I was 17 and I loved him dearly. We were engaged. It is the great tragedy of my life that he never lived to be my husband.

"But one of those diaries stopped two years before his death. The other starts about two weeks afterwards. And it isnt exactly a diary.

"When the shock began to wear off I started to write about how I missed him and about how I loved him. It was more a record of my emotions and sensations at that time than a day to day log of my comings and goings."

In Mrs. Fillmore's deposition, a preliminary to her suit against her mother, Attorney Clyde Murphy asked the questions and received the following answers:

Q. What did you give your mother for that agreement?—A. Do you want me to speak very freely?

Q. Yes.—I protected her against the Taylor murder case.

Q. Is it your contention, is that correct, that your mother killed William Desmond Taylor?—A. I don't have to answer that.

Continuing, Murphy asked Mrs. Fillmore if she and her sister, Miss Minter, did not enter a safety deposit box last August. Mrs. Fillmore replied:

"I did it on purpose. I did it to give her two diaries that were so diabolical, so pathetic that they made Mary Astor's diary look like a postscript. I didn't want Mrs. Shelby to publish them against this girl."

Miss Minter said today she "came home last night and found my maid in hysterics." She said the police, who were still there, "had been going through all my things and found the wall safe and had taken the diaries. They were reading them when I came in. That's the first I knew of all this. But I have nothing to hide and would have come here even if I had not been subpenaed."

District Attorney Buron Fitts said that the diaries proved to be "of utterly no value in this case."

"It had been previously reported to my office that these diaries held the secret of the Taylor killing," he explained.

Eugene Marcus, counsel for Miss Minter, said:

"This investigation smacks of an ulterior motive."

A bullet in his back, the body of Taylor was found on the floor of his living room February 2, 1922. Investigations that flared then and intermittently since, the names of Miss Minter, Mabel Normand and a host of other film personalities who had known the director were brought up, but none could throw any light on the mystery of his death.

German Airships at Lakehurst Kept Naval Officers Jittery

Captain of Los Angeles, Fearing Explosion of Gas, Once Threatened to Take Graf Zeppelin Out Himself if Sailing Was Delayed, Story Goes.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 6.—The highly inflammable hydrogen gas used by visiting German dirigibles has given naval officers at the station here edgy nerves often in the past, because of the explosion danger.

This was particularly true when one of the Navy's dirigibles, filled with nonexplosive, noninflammable helium gas, was also docked at the station.

When the Graf Zepplein arrived on its trips, the Navy's Los Angeles was usually off on a training cruise, by accident or design. One time, however, both ships were in the big hangar together and the Germans tarried, waiting ideal weather.

The story was told by Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, then skipper of the Los Angeles and the present commander of the air station.

When the delay became too great, Roendahl, the anecdote goes, called an officer of the Graf who was his personal friend and said emphatically, "Ernest, if you don't take that ship out tomorrow, I'll take her out myself."

The Graf departed next day.

U.S. Will Continue Dirigible Building Despite Tragedy

The Hindenburg disaster will not doom construction plans for lighter-than-air-craft in the United States, said spokesmen for the Virginia Airship Co., Inc., of Richmond, last night.

Work on an all-metal, Diesel powered dirigible will begin within three weeks at Richmond, according to P. H. McAlexander, district manager of the concern.

The proposed ship, he said, will use nothing but helium gas, and all construction work will be noninflamable. Retractable landing wheels will permit landing in a small area without the necessity of a mooring mast, McAlexander said.

"Because of this tragic accident," he added, "lighter-than-air-craft should not be condemned. The United States doesn't have to depend on foreign countries to develop safe and efficient dirigibles."

Dr. Max M. Munk, international dirigible expert, is acting as consultant on preparations to build the new ship, said McAlexander. The craft will be 300 feet in length, capable of carrying 40 passengers and 10 tons of freight.

Coast Guard, Marines To Help at Lakehurst

The Coast Guard headquarters last night received radio advice that Capt. Burke, of the Coast Guard, with 20 men, and Capt. Van Orden, of the United States Marines, with 20 men, had departed from Cape May, N. J., at 7:35, E. S. T., to Lakehurst, "for emergency duty as needed."

The Coast Guard party moved from Cape May, it was said, without awaiting instructions from Washington. It was presumed they took emergency equipment.

Goes to Disaster Scene.

Don Smith, national director of the Red Cross War Service, left Washington for Lakehurst late last night, the Red Cross announced. John Eckhart, field director of the war service, stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J., was immediately ordered to the scene of disaster.

Use of Helium In Hindenburg Was Intended

Ship Originally Designed for Safe Gas, Navy Expert Reveals.

The dirigible Hindenburg was originally designed to use non-inflammable helium, rather than highly explosive hydrogen, it was learned here last night.

According to Charles B. Burgess, an aerologist in the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, the Hindenburg was designed to use helium. Last minute changes in plans, however, necessitated using hydrogen, a more buoyant gas, but one which explodes violently and is highly inflammable.

Burgess said that German interests were planning a new airship several years ago at the time of the crash of England's R-101, in 1930. The crash completely changed German plans, and a new, larger ship, using helium, was designed. When completed, however, the ship was found so much heavier than expected that hydrogen had to be used instead.

The Navy aerologist also stated that he thought the explosion would not have a profound effect on the Navy's plans for lighter-than-air construction. He pointed out that the Navy had not used hydrogen for the last 15 years.

Germans in the Capital said last night that their country's inability to pay for helium was one of the reasons helium was not used, although they added that hydrogen did have a 33 per cent greater lifting power.

It was recalled that President Roosevelt, shortly after the Navy's dirigible Macon was destroyed on the Pacific Coast, indicated the United States Government would permit exports of helium to other countries for scientific and experimental purposes.

The United States has a world monopoly on the safe gas, and previously exports had been prohibited. Germany never accepted Mr. Roosevelt's offer, because exchange was lacking and because hydrogen's greater lifting power permitted greater pay loads of freight.

Lakehurst Station Closed to Public

New York, May 6 (AP).—The Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., tonight was closed to the public for an indefinite period.

As thousands of curiosity-seekers swarmed toward the field upon hearing of the Hindenburg explosion, Comdr. Charles F. Rosendahl announced that the station would be "entirely closed to the public until further notice."

To assist in controlling crowds and guarding the station, 50 patrolmen left Manhattan police headquarters shortly before 8 o'clock from Newark, N. J., where they took airplanes for Lakehurst.

Lange Eyewitness Of Airship Tragedy

Lieut. Comdr. Karl L. Lange, of Washington, commander of the Goodyear blimp, which flies regularly over the District, was an eyewitness to the Hindenburg explosion yesterday.

Lange, a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, was greatly interested in the airship in which he had made several transatlantic crossings and had visited Lakehurst to see it land.

Garnett Orders Release of Two Held in Jail Without Trial

Third Court to Speed Justice Opens Monday; Bondsmen Are Required to File Reports; Hazen Assails Parole of Gamblers.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday ordered the release of two prisoners at the District Jail who had been held nearly a year without trial.

As an aftermath of the Washington Criminal Justice Association's first annual report, his action followed a story in The Post disclosing the large number of accused prisoners awaiting delayed prosecution.

Other highlights in the local crime situation yesterday were:

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen assailed action of the District Parole Board in releasing ten convicted gamblers, and discussed the matter at length with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

A third criminal court was established to speed justice for those awaiting trial, and Garnett promised all pending cases would be cleared before the courts' usual summer recess.

Professional bondsmen have been called upon by Garnett to submit reports on their total obligations in all District courts and the United States marshal's office.

Garnett nolle prossed forgery and uttering charges against Walter C. Johnson and Edward Dietrict, and they were immediately freed. Since June 2, 1936, the two men have remained in custody at the District Jail awaiting trial. They also were witnesses in another case, which was disposed of last March.

Garnett said their long detention was due to pending motions and pleas before the court. The charges, he added, were finally nolle prossed for lack of sufficient evidence.

Although convicted of no crime, the two men were forced to remain in jail nearly a year before charges against them were acted upon. Repeatedly, it was learned, jail attaches questioned the long delay, wondering if the pair had been "forgotten"

Garnett indicated his action in releasing the men was planned before current results of the criminal justice group's report. The release papers, however, were not signed or delivered to Jail Superintendent Thomas M. Rives until midafternoon yesterday.

The Parole Board's release of ten gamblers convicted in 1935 with Sam Beard, Washington gaming czar, brought a wave of indignant protest from city officials.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, following a conference with Maj. Brown, declared:

"I am not pleased with the Parole Board's action. Those men were convicted of gambling by a court of justice and their release on parole reflects on the judge and jury who ordered them jailed. The city is attempting to clean up crime—and why should convicted gamblers be turned loose?"

Hazen indicated he could do nothing further and the board's decison must stand. Maj. Brown refused to comment—"for publication."

Commissioner Hazen's criticism of the parole board brought an immediate rejoinder from Wilbur La Roe, jr., board member, who said:

"Commissioner Hazen says that the action of the parole board reflects on the judge who sentenced these gamblers.

"The parole board was informed by attorneys for the gamblers that the sentencing judge had stated that he would have imposed shorter sentences had he been in possession of all of the facts at the time.

Parole Recommended.

"The board, therefore, contacted the sentencing judge and confirmed this, receiving from the court a carefully prepared memorandum reciting the facts and recommending in effect that these men be paroled.

"They had no past records and might well have been placed on probation. Under these facts I feel sure that Commissioner Hazen will withdraw his criticism."

On Monday, it was announced yesterday, a third criminal court will be set up to increase efficiency in disposing of pending cases. Justice Jesse C. Adkins will sit as a criminal judge.

Garnett conceded there are more prisoners than usual in jail awaiting trial. He said the routine business of the criminal courts has been slowed by several unusually long cases.

"It is not unusual for us to run a little behind in our trials as the end of the court term approaches," Garnett said. "The same condition existed last year, but with the aid of a third criminal justice we were able to catch up so that there were only six or eight prisoners still in jail awaiting trial when the term ended. By the end of this term, our docket will be about in the same condition—if not better."

Jail records have shown a total of 256 cases awaiting trial.

As a result of the recent gambling raids, Garnett added, grand jury procedure also has been delayed.

After reading the association's report on the manner in which professional bondsmen sign bails far in excess of their assets, Garnett called for complete information.

"But the bond situation in Washington is in pretty fair condition," Garnett said. "Even if a bondsman pledged 10 times the amount of his unencumbered assets, there would have to be 100 forfeitures out of every 1,000 bonds issued before the situation became dangerous—and that number of forfeitures is very unlikely."

Schmeling Planned Hindenburg Trip

Spectator, N. Y., May 6 (AP).—Only luck kept Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, from being aboard the ill-fated dirigible Hindenburg tonight. Schmeling arrived here today to train for his scheduled June title bout with James J. Braddock.

Thunderstruck when informed of the tragedy at Lakehurst, he said: "I booked passage on the Hindenburg, but had to change my plans and come by boat when my manager, Joe Jacobs, cabled me to be sure and be in New York on May 4. I meant to go back to Germany aboard her, too."

Italians Massing for Offensive to Crush Bilbao

Fascist Press Term Attack War's Climax

Heavily Armed Troops Prepare to Capture Basque Center.

The Spanish War.

Italian troops were reported massing for a drive on Bilbao, which they hoped would be the decisive battle of the Spanish civil war.

Five thousand women and children left Bilbao for France aboard Spanish government ships under the protecting guns of British warships.

An unresisted insurgent advance along the whole Aragon front of northeastern Spain and withdrawal of 12,000 government troops from civil war fronts to keep peace in revolt-torn Barcelona was reported.

Senator Borah, assailing the reported destruction of Guernica, Spanish "holy city," by insurgent bombers, warned that "fascism's aim is the destruction of all democracies."

Italians Mass.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 6.—Italian correspondents today saw the forthcoming Spanish insurgent attack on Bilbao as the possible climax of the civil war and revealed Italian volunteers in the insurgent ranks were massing for the drive.

Torrential rains held up the push on the Basque capital, the correspondents reported, but added an Italian brigade, headed by a crack battalion called the "Black Arrow," was ready for the fight.

The "Black Arrow" legion was cited today for its part in the capture and defense of Bermeo.

"Legionnaires of the 'Black Arrow' and other volunteers are flocking to the Bay of Biscay coast sector," the correspondent for La Tribuna said. "They will oppose warlike, well-armed troops. But the legionnaires know that having many enemies means having much honor, and Italian legionnaires are waiting to write on their banner a new name and a new date—of a new and victorious battle."

The Italians were said to be equipped with machine guns, mortars and artillery.

Describing the capture of trenches in Mount Sollube and the occupation of several crossroad settlements, Renzo Segala, writing in Corriere della Sera of Milan, says: "Both these operations were the work of a mixed brigade which was composed predominantly of Italian volunteers. They were resisted stoutly, but the Reds (Spanish government troops) finally fled, leaving behind dozens of prisoners."

The writers said the Italian brigades were under the command of an Italian general. Fascist circles here say it is possible the general may be Attilio Teruzzi, former commander of the Fascist blackshirt militia, who, they recently disclosed, was sent by Mussolini to Spain to reorganize the blackshirt volunteers.

Further information in diplomatic circles on the recent conversations between Mussolini and German Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath apparently substantiated the correspondents' belief that the coming attack on Bilbao may have important consequences on the end of the war.

These sources said Il Duce and Von Neurath agreed on the following campaign in Spain:

1. To pursue the attack on Bilbao with all force possible in order to obtain a striking victory.

2. If victory comes there, to pursue the war vigorously in the hopes of a bigger victory, say, in Madrid.

3. If victory does not come at Bilbao, then agree to negotiate a compromise.

It was regarded as significant that Virginio Gayda, writing on the Mussolini-Van Neurath conversations today in Giornale d'Italia, did not reject the possibility of a compromise, but pointed out that Germany and Italy would consider "with natural reserve" any proposal for mediation.

5,000 Flee Bilbao.

Bilbao, Spain, May 6 (AP).—Proud Basques sped their women and children from the danger of battle and starvation tonight under the protecting guns of British warships, and made ready to stand defiant siege against the insurgent army.

Five thousand women and children left Bilbao for France this morning aboard the government ships Habana and Izarra. The French liner Calamare was designated to carry the second refugee contingent to Bordeaux tonight.

The Habana and Izarra slipped into the Bay of Biscay for the dash to Bordeaux in the misty dawn, to face the threat of the insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera and the destroyer Velasco.

Quickly, however, the convoying British battleship Royal Oak and two British destroyers formed a protective flank. The insurgent warship withdrew. The destroyer Velasco also turned back after hovering for a time in the distance.

During the day insurgent air raids over Bilbao and surrounding villages sent residents scurrying for cover. The nearby village of Larrauri was razed by bombs, and that of Munguia was partially destroyed. One insurgent plane was shot down near Urrmendi.

The Basque fighters said they held 2,000 insurgents in a trap to the northeast of the capital. They were reported to be Italian units of Gen. Emilio Mola's army and faced slow starvation unless they surrendered, the Basques asserted.

Peru's Consulate Raided.

Madrid, May 6 (AP).—Police tonight raided the Peruvian consulate and confiscated a radio transmitting apparatus allegedly used by Spanish refugees to supply military information to the insurgents. Four hundred refugees in the building, many of them women and children, were detained.

Tears, Clashes Follow Eden's Warning to Europe on Spain

Foreign Secretary Predicts 'Terrible' Fate for Continent if Guernica Incident Is Repeated; Commons Thrown Into Uproar.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, May 6.—Members shouted down their opponents and a woman burst into sobs in the House of Commons tonight when Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden warned that repeated bombing of Spain's civilian population "will mean a terrible future for all Europe."

He referred to the destruction April 27 of the Basque "Holy City" of Guernica—allegedly by 100 German aviators who bombed and machine-gunned 800 men, women and children to death.

"This government is doing its utmost to prevent the Spanish furnace from setting fire to Europe," Eden said.

Calls It "Deplorable."

He described the horror of Guernica as "a particularly deplorable example of bombing and machine-gunning from the air," but added quickly he wanted the members of Commons and other nations to understand "this country's feeling is not caused by any desire to put any other country on the block."

Eden's warning, made a few minutes before Parliament adjourned for the coronation festivities and the Whitsun holiday, was interrupted by violent clashes among Conservatives, Laborites and the lone Communist member of Commons.

Ellen C. Wilkinson, Laborite who marched with the Jarrow hunger strikers into London and who recently visited the United States, remarked during the debate:

"When I was in Spain I was among young soldiers and officers—"

Laughter Annoys Her.

Her words brought laughter from the government benches.

She blanched, staggered and tears rolled down her cheeks.

"Really, your sense of humor sometimes is contemptible—it's offensive!" she screamed.

The Spanish debate started when Dr. David Rhys Grenfell, Laborite, asked for a straightforward pronouncement of the government's policy in regard to the civil war.

"There never has been a declaration of international character so openly evaded as the nonintervention pact," he said.

Arms Proposal Rejected.

London, May 6 (AP).—The British government rejected today proposals for peacetime nationalization of armaments factories or for more rigid control of private manufacture.

A cabinet white paper held sweeping changes now might disrupt the $7,500,000,000 defense program and would be unwise concentration of an "isolated aspect" of a problem which should be settled by international agreement. There would, however, be quick action in the event of war.

Butler, Davis Honored.

New York, May 6 (AP).—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler today was re-elected president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and John W. Davis, Democratic canditate for President in 1924, was elected vice president.

Thomases Leave Moscow.

Moscow, May 6 (AP). — Norman Thomas and his wife departed for Leningrad and Helsingfors today after a week's sightseeing on their first visit to the Soviet Union, where they saw no government officials, but had "an excellent time," Thomas said.

Rebels Advance Unresisted on Aragon Front

400 Slain in Anarchist Revolt at Barcelona, Report Says.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish frontier, May 6.—Reports of an unresisted insurgent advance along the whole Aragon front of northeastern Spain and the withdrawal of 12,000 government troops to keep the peace in troubled Barcelona put a new and serious face on the Catalan anarchist insurrection tonight.

[French border dispatches received by the United Press said anarchists had overthrown the dictatorship of President Luis Companys in Barcelona and dominated the city. The dispatches said anarchists issued an ultimatum to the Catalonian government to dissolve all assault guards in 24 hours or they would attack the guards with tanks and poison gas.—Editor's note.]

Reports also were received from several sources that Antonio Sese, the Socialist U. G. T. (General Worker's Union) member of the newly formed provisional government in Barcelona, had been assassinated as he left the first meeting of the cabinet.

400 Reported Slain.

These reports, emanating from insurgent Spain and not officially confirmed, coincided with a Barcelona radio broadcast which said 400 persons had been killed and 1,000 injured since anarchists revolted last Tuesday and fought in streets and buildings with Catalan supporters of the main Spanish government.

Collapse of the Aragon front would seriously endanger the whole government system of eastern defenses.

This front, practically stationary since the beginning of the war, has been a wall to keep the insurgents from Catalonia and the Mediterranean.

It runs southwest from the French border, passing close to insurgent-held Huesca and Zaragoza.

An insurgent invasion of Catalonia might cut the government's land contact with France and deny the government some of its principal ports and most valuable industrial region.

Likewise, it would threaten Valencia, the temporary capital of the main Spanish government to the south.

Authorities in that city have been trying to take command of the Aragon front from the Catalans, putting it in charge of Gen. Sebastian Pozas. But Pozas, now sent to Barcelona to take military command there in the name of the main government, has his hands full.

Spanish government reports indicated Barcelona was quieting, but border advices indicated there was at least some fresh fighting and much confusion of authority. Telephonic communications within Catalonia, re-established yesterday, were broken anew.

Group Offers Aid To RA in Dispute

A committee from the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Association was named last night to assist in settlement of the current labor dispute at the Resettlement Administration's low-cost housing project at Greenbelt, Md. The action was taken at the Federation's meeting in the Bladensburg firehouse.

Members of the committee are Jack Riggles, of Seabrook; Warren Thomas, of Edmonston, and Joseph McDonald, of Lanham.

The committee was instructed to co-operate with the labor division of the Resettlement Administration in an effort to smooth out differences arising between members of District of Columbia labor unions and Maryland workers employed at the project.

Dictator Controls Vote.

Quito, Ecuador, May 6 (AP).—Priests, ministers, women and communists were barred from voting today in a decree by Dictator Frederick Paez which set July 11 for election of deputies to the assembly—the voters limited to those listed by the military who can read and write.

Borah Looses Scathing Attack On Fascist Rule

Ruthless Creed Challenges All Democratic Tenets, He Tells Senate.

His savage words belying his placid manner, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, spoke yesterday in the Senate the bitterest denunciation of fascism ever heard in that body.

Condemning the theory and practice of fascism, and terming the recent bombing of the Basque city, Guernica, by Spanish insurgent airplanes "the most revolting instance of mass massacre of modern times," the veteran Senate spowesman on foreign relations based his address on the point:

"There is no tenet of democracy which fascism does not challenge."

Borah stood simply by his seat, gesturing less than usual, following a prepared manuscript closely, a procedure unprecedented with the Idahoan. The cold ferocity with which he spoke focussed the attention of the Senate and the galleries, both of which were unusually silent—an indirect tribute only awarded the most effective speeches.

Built on Democracy's Ruins.

He said: "There is not a vital principle of free government with which this ruthless creed is not in conflict. It is built, and professes to be built, upon the ruins of democracy. It is grounded in force. It could not survive a fortnight in the atmosphere of free discussion."

Not once did he name Hitler or Mussolini, but he did quote freely from Il Duce's speeches, referring to him as "the highest authority on the subject."

Borah asserted fascism was a greater threat to American government than communism because "it has far more supporters in this country and they are much more active and much more adroit in the manner in which they are accomplishing their end."

He then read from a dispatch in the London Times on Italian reprisals in Addis Ababa after the attempt on the life of Marshal Graziani, the viceroy, noting that this and other dispatches agreed that 6,000 helpless native Ethiopians were slaughtered immediately after the bomb was thrown at the marshal. He said with evident bitterness:

"Repudiation of Civilization."

"This is the logic of fascism. This is the logic of the system which is founded on force. This is not courage, but cowardice, not government, but brute savagery, not war, but butchery * * * It is a repudiation of civilization."

He went on slowly and with icy emphasis:

"From Ethiopia let us go to Spain. Here fascism presents to the world its masterpiece. It has hung upon the wall of civilization a painting that will never come down—never fade out of the memories of men * * *."

"* * * It remained for the Fascist warfare to select out the deadliest weapons which the ingenuity of man has contrived and to show the world how thorough and effective these weapons are when used for the destruction of women and children.

"Guernica was not a single instance but a culmination of a long line of unspeakable atrocities. * * * The city was a long distance from the battle line. The attack had no legitimate military objective. An unarmed, noncombatant city was singled out for the most revolting instance of mass massacre of modern times. It was Fascist strategy."

A moment's silence and then a little ripple of sighs, as tense listeners relaxed in their seats, came as the Senator sat down.

Hull Cables Reich His Condolences For Air Disaster

Shocked at the disaster to the Dirigible Hindenburg, Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night cabled his condolences to Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, Minister of Foreign Affairs, at Berlin,.

"I extend to you and to the people of Germany my profound sympathy at the tragic accident to the Dirigible Hindenburg and the resultant loss of life to passengers and crew," said Secretary Hull.

Text of Senator Borah's Address Denouncing Fascism

Text of remarks by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, in the Senate yesterday in denunciation of fascism:

Mr. President: Not the least among the sacrifices of the World War has been its baneful effect upon the long accepted and well established principles of free government. * * *

Arbitrary power has spread and democracy has receded; individual liberties have been curtailed and often abolished in the remorseless sweep of absolute government until in our own land men seriously debate the question of whether democracy is worth saving.

Some things are transpiring, however, which ought to convince us that democracy is worth saving, that it is worth fighting for, as they fought for it of old—not necessarily on the field of battle, but fighting the forces which ceaselessly seek to undermine and destroy it in the very citadel of its greatest triumph here in the United States.

"Insidious" Propaganda.

I doubt very much if we are fully aware of the insidious, subtle effort being constantly put forth in this country by the advocates of that theory of government called fascism. It has far more supporters in this country than communism and they are much more active and much more adroit in the manner in which they are accomplishing their end. They work in wholly different methods from Communists. Both are the avowed enemies of democracy, both would destroy individual liberty, both would establish in its place abject economic and political freedom. There can be no compromise between democracy and either of these systems.

We need not be in doubt as to the teachings and objectives of fascism. The highest authority on the subject on a comparatively recent occasion publicly declared: "Today we bury solemnly all lies of universal democratic suffrage." * * *

Challenges Democracy.

There is no tenet of democracy which fascism does not challenge. There is not a vital principle of free government with which this ruthless creed is not in conflict. It is built, and professes to be built, upon the ruins of democracy. * * *

On February 19 last an assault was made on Marshal Graziani, in charge of affairs at Addis Ababa in Ethiopia. Under a government of law, an effort would have been made to find the offender and punish him under the law. But under a system where there is no law, save the master's will, such is not the procedure. Under a system whose sole right to exist is fright and force, the procedure is different.

I read from a dispatch in the London Times as follows: The dispatch was under date of March 24, but the incident recorded was under date of March 3. "The Italian reprisals in Addis Ababa after the attempt on Marshal Graziani, the viceroy, were carried out with a savagery almost beyond description. For three days after the attempted assassination of the marshal every able-bodied Italian in the place appears to have been encouraged to slaughter natives.

Used Flame-Throwers.

"With rifles, pistols, bombs, knives and clubs served out for the occasion, gangs of Blackshirts and workmen went through the native quarters killing every man, woman and child they came across. Others, with flame-throwers and tins of petrol, fired the flimsy huts and houses and shot down those who tried to escape. Immediately after the bomb was thrown at Marshal Graziani, Italian troops surrounded the area, and every Abyssinian within the circle was killed. Other troops were sent to search for arms and round up any suspects. As has already been reported, some 2,000 natives were arrested. The majority were shot. Then the Italian militiamen and workmen were called up, served with weapons, and told to do what they liked with the natives. The number of victims in this massed slaughter is stated to be about 6,000."

This is the logic of fascism. This is the logic of the system which is founded upon force. This is not courage but cowardice, not government but brute savagery, not war but butchery. We have to go back to the days of Attila to find anything to compare with this ruthless destruction of helpless men, women and children. It is a repudiation of civilization.

Spanish Masterpiece.

From Ethiopia let us go to Spain. Here fascism presents to the world its masterpiece. It has hung upon the wall of civilization a painting that will never come down—never fade out of the memories of men. So long as men and woman may be interested in searching out from the pages of history outstanding acts of cruelty and instances of needless destruction of human life, they will linger longest and with the greatest horror over the savage story of the Fascist war in Spain. We have always been familiar with those stories of unspeakable barbarity which come down to us from the dim pages of Oriental history. But those things happened long before men had felt the humanizing effect of centuries of Christian civilization. The butcheries of helpless women and children in Spain occurred in the very morning of the twentieth century.

Modern warfare, with its improved instruments of destruction of both property and life, is revolting at best. But it remained for the Fascist warfare to select out the deadliest weapons which the ingenuity of man has contrived and to show to the world how thorough and effective these weapons are when used for the destruction of women and children. How effective are the airplanes when throwing bombs and hand grenades into homes! How airplanes swooping low like winged monsters can massacre thousands of innocent children without endangering in the slightest the lives of the brave assailants! And how at the same time they can set a non-combatant city on fire and leave the streets covered with the charred bodies of the slain while the intrepid Fascist soldiers escape without a wound!

Guernica Atrocity.

No language can describe the scene at Guernica, and Guernica was not a single instance, it was simply a culmination of a long line of unspeakable atrocities. It was not a military maneuver. The city was a long distance from the battle line. The attack had no legitimate military objective. An unarmed, non-combatant city was singled out for the most revolting instance of mass massacre of modern times. It was Fascist strategy.

Mr. President, I have no choice between communism and fascism. The latter is supposed to be more respectable than the former and finds a more ready entree into respectable society. But they are both enemies of every vital liberty and every right and privilege of the average man or woman. Both reduce the average citizen to a state of political and economic serfdom. Both succeed in breeding and fostering discontent in all the different nations in the world. Both have their active propagandists in our own country.

Farley Is Invited To Learn History At Carolina Fete

James A. Farley, eminent Postmaster General, whose eminence as a historian is being questioned, glumly chewed his gum and contemplated last night an invitation to take a postgraduate course, designed to set him straight on early Americana.

The bid came from Gov. Clyde R. Hoey, of North Carolina, after Farley's speech at Alexandria Wednesday placing Sir Walter Raleigh where he wasn't supposed to be. Hoey said:

"I read in the papers that you were a little mixed up on your history and tried to give North Carolina's Sir Walter Raleigh to our neighbors in Virginia.

"For that reason I am particularly anxious to have you accept my personal invitation to be present at the 350th anniversary celebration of the birth of Virginia Dare, first white child born in America, to be held at Manteo, N. C., next August 18. I know you will enjoy it and all will have the opportunity of getting straightened out historically by our principal speaker and Harvard University's most illustrious graduate, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Goodyear to Shun 'Company' Unions

Labor chalked up another victory yesterday when the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. notified the National Lebor Relations Board it was completely disassociating itself from the industrial representation plan and the industrial assemblies of its employes. The organizations had been attacked as "company unions," forbidden by the Wagner labor relations act. The company also said it was ending its relations with the so-called Stahl-Mate Club of its Akron plant employes.

Howard F. Burns, of Cleveland, representing the company, made the statement to the board, which last July issued a complaint charging discrimination against union employes, complicity in labor disturbances at Gadsden, Ala., and domination of the industrial representation plan.

The company stated specifically it would not discourage membership of its employes in the United Rubber Workers, a union affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Edward to Marry Mrs. Simpson on May 14, He Hints

Monts, France, May 6 (U.P.).—The Duke of Windsor announced tonight—while Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson was trying on her pale blue wedding gown—that they will be married "very soon after May 12."

The wedding, probably a simple affair in the sixteenth century library of the Chateau de Cande, may be on Friday, May 14, two days after the coronation of King George VI in London.

Edward has agreed to do nothing that might detract from the pageantry and empire interest in his brother's crowning.

Hermann L. Rogers, spokesman for the duke and Mrs. Simpson, indicated that the wedding plans virtually are completed, awaiting only the passing of the coronation.

Congressman Finds Botanical Gardens Suited to Hobby

A Texas Representative who loves to dabble in a garden has refused to let Washington's atmosphere upset his pet hobby.

W. R. Poage, a first term Democrat, came to the Capital with the intention of practicing his great interest, gardening, but was met with "rows of apartment houses in place of rows of flowers." Then he spotted the botanical gardens.

Congressonal influence won him permission and soon he was helping to tend flowers and shrubbery in the Government's gardens.

Hindenburg Passengers Wave Greetings Just Before Flaming Plunge

Horrified Crowd Sees Lunge to Fiery Death

Giant German Sky Liner, Arriving After Fighting Winds Over Atlantic, Hurtles to Destruction After Unexplained Explosion.

Eighteen trips had been planned this year.

Army trucks and ambulances rushed to the tangled, burning wreck to succor those who had escaped with their lives. The body of one woman, presumably a passenger, was picked up from the landing field.

Within a few moments after the explosion and the billowing flames that mushroomed out immediately, the twisted metal framework of the dirigible sprawled on the ground.

Passenger Escapes by Jumping.

Those on the ship and survived were so stunned by the unexpected disaster they could not tell what had happened. "There was a blinding flash," said one passenger, Herbert O'Laughlin, of Chicago, "but the people on the ground would know more about it than we would on the ship."

O'Laughlin related how he escaped by leaping from the ship when she plummeted close to the ground.

From his vantage point on the ground an Associated Press photographer, Murray Becker, gave this vivid eye picture:

"The ship burst toward the tail end, near the center. The tail went down first and the nose seemed to hang in the air.

"I ran toward the ship and saw it enveloped in flame. In a fraction of a second there was nothing left but the skeleton.

"I saw a man walking toward me, assisted by two men. He had no clothes on. I saw a woman on a stretcher. There were screams from men and women on the field."

The heat from the burning bag was terrific. A State-wide police alarm was broadcast for ambulances and doctors and they responded by airplane and automoble from several cities.

Delayed by Headwinds at Sea.

Storms and headwinds at sea had delayed the Hindenburg on her first trip of the season. Originally she was scheduled to nose down to a landing at 6 a. m. (Eastern Daylight Time) today. The plan was for her to refuel speedily and then take off at 10 p. m., with a list of passengers bound for the coronation at London next week.

The ship had been delayed before by unfavorable weather and there was no hint of anything untoward in the air as she glided in gracefully toward dusk after cruising over New Jersey for an hour to wait for the most favorable landing time—the evening.

The ground crew moved out onto the vast pine tree bordered field as they had done so many times before when the ship came to port. The comings and goings of the ship had become so routine that a comparatively small crowd of spectators had gathered to watch her.

Capt. Pruss had been maneuvering the ship to make certain to get favorable landing conditions. He had stayed aloft over the field more than an hour to ride out the rainstorm. Then he nosed her down.

But instead of another routine mooring of the great air liner, disaster struck, and explosion destroyed the swastika-emblazoned ship.

Herbert M. Le Compte, of nearby Lakewood, who gave first aid treatment to some of the survivors, said none of them was able to tell what caused the explosion.

One explanation advanced was that a spark of static electricity had ignited the inflammable hydrogen gas which gave the sky cruiser its buoyancy. Some support of this was given by Maj. George F. Hobson, of Camp Dix, who was on the field superintending the work of soldiers working with the sailors in the ground crew.

Ground Crew Panic Stricken.

The ground crew, he said, had hold of the spider landing ropes from the ship's nose, easing her down, when there appeared to be a sudden spark near her tail fins and in an instant a third of the ship was engulfed in flames.

The ground crew, he said, dropped the landing ropes in panic haste and raced from under the plunging, flaming ship for safety. Women fainted, men screamed as the crowd recoiled in a terrific backward surge.

Night closed in swiftly after the disaster, but two hours after the crash the ship still burned. The fuel oil for the powerful dirigible's Diesel motors was apparently feeding the flames as they licked through the warped and blackened aluminum skeleton near what had once been the center of the ship.

A half-dozen volunteer fire departments poured lines of water on the flames, while rescue workers waited patiently until they could be brought under control and the wreckage made safe for a search for possible bodies.

In the background gloom towered the huge naval dirigible hangar, once the home port of the ill-fated Shenandoah and the Akron, the Navy airships that were destroyed.

One witness standing almost directly under the ship said:

"As she dropped her lines down at 8:20, E. S. T., there was a burst of flame and a loud report which appeared to be just aft of the port stern gondola. There was a loud shout: 'Run for your lives' from the ground crew and the second explosion came about 30 seconds later.

Fabric Quickly Burned.

"The ship buckled as the flames spread from the aft forward and then slowly settled to the ground. With several of the others I ran as far as I could out of the circle.

"I saw the ship just sink down and the flames go through it. The fabric burned away in a few seconds. I turned back with others to go as close to the ship as possible to pick up the survivors.

"Within 40 feet of the blazing wreckage there were two men slightly bleeding, one as though he had been punched in the mouth. Then I saw his right hand was badly singed. He said he was Clifford Osbun, of Chicago, and the other said he was Philip Mongon.

"Osbun was discussing with Mongon the possibility of going back to seek a third companion who stood with them when the explosion occurred.

"Osbun told me they were standing together in the dining salon and looking down watching the preparations to moor. The next thing he knew he was thrown right out of the side of the ship, apparently out of the port and found himself on the ground.

"I tossed both of them in a car and we rode to the Naval Hospital.

"There were two explosions. She floated down gently.

Men's Clothes Blown Off.

"The heat was terrific. You could feel it on your body and it rocked you. I saw nobody jump. I could hear people screaming and hollering when she hit the ground. I saw bodies on the track and some of the crew walking around in a daze, nude.

"I saw the radio man. I think his name is Hartmann. There wasn't a scratch on him. He was walking in a daze. We couldn't tell how many got out alive but I saw about six walking."

An official report timed the blast at 6:23 p. m. (Eastern Standard time). Official sources said as far as was known, none of the United States Navy officers, or civilian ground crew lost their lives.

F. W. von Meister, vice president of the American Zeppelin Transport Co., the general United States agents for the German Zeppelin Transport Co., the Hindenburg's owners, said there were two possible causes for the explosions.

Two Causes Considered.

First, he listed the rainy condition which prevailed at the Naval Air Station when the landing was attempted. The ship cruised over the field for an hour to ride out a storm and nosed down while rain was still falling.

The rainy condition, von Meister said, would make for the creation of a spark of static electricity when landing ropes were dropped and such a spark might have touched off the highly explosive hydrogen gas which gave the long silver ship its lifting power.

The second theory was that a spark flew from one of the engines when they were throttled down for the landing. The ship had been valving hydrogen preparatory to landing and he theorized some of the gas might have gathered in a pocket under the tail surfaces and detonated when the spark flew back.

Some authorities scouted the theory that the explosion could have been caused by the ignition of hydrogen inside the gas cells. They said a mixture of 20 per cent free air with hydrogen would be necessary to cause an explosion, indicating the first blast must have occurred outside one of the gas cells.

Aeronautical experts said the only way they could explain an explosion inside the ship would be that free hydrogen had in some way escaped and was lying in the stern of the ship, where it was accidentally ignited.

The ship was 76 hours and 23 minutes out of Frankfort-on-Main, her home port, when the disaster occurred.

The ship, largest lighter-than-air craft ever built, made the voyages between Lakehurst and Germany last summer without mishap. The trips were designed to test the feasibility of regular airship service between the two continents.

Dr. Eckener, famous airship commander, and Capt. Lehmann were skippers of the Hindenburg last year. Capt. Pruss, assuming command for the first time on this trip, has worked in close cooperation with these two veterans. He traveled with both the Graf Zeppelin and the Hindenburg last year and was on the Graf on its trips to the Arctic, Northern Africa and around the world.

Pruss also was aboard the old Los Angeles, decommissioned airship of the United States Navy, when it was brought to the United States in 1924 and he spent five months at Lakehurst as an instructor in 1924-25.

The Zeppelin was to have made 18 round trips this year and was to have cut its time at Lakehurst to one day on each trip. Speedier reservicing operations were worked out during the off-season by Lieut. Comdr. C. V. S. Knox, assembly and repair officer at the naval air station, and technicians of the oil company which supplied the ship with its hydrogen lifting gas and Diesel fuel oil.

Those aboard the Zeppelin included several lighter-than-air students and the first doctor ever assigned to a Zeppelin.

District Survivor Blames Blast On Maniac, Bullet or Cigarets

As causes of the Hindenburg explosion, a Washingtonian, W. R. F. Hines, a passenger, last night listed maniacs, incendiary bullets and carelessly lighted cigarettes.

"Ship's officers were very strict about smoking," he said, "and it was supposed to be confined to an aluminum-lined room located on the lower deck. A match, they feared, might ignite the whole hydrogen-filled bag.

"But all passengers had free run of the dirigible. A careless passenger, against all rules, might smoke in his berth. It is conceivable, too, some maniac might have thrown a match directly into the bag.

After declaring there are a large number of "mean" people in the country, some of whom, perhaps, anti-Nazis, Hines said some one may have fired an incendiary bullet into the ship as it was landing.

"That would have meant an immediate explosion," he added.

On his trip, Hines said he noticed one unusual thing—there were no parachutes. Consequently, he asked one of the ship's lieutenants the accident procedure.

"What's the use?" asked the lieutenant, with a shrug of his shoulders.

Asked whether he would again fly in a dirigible, Hines replied, "If they fill it with helium—yes."

Legion Is Opposed To Naval Economy

Indianapolis, May 6 (AP).—J. O'Connor Roberts, of Washington, chairman of the American Legion's national defense committee, said tonight his organization would oppose any attempt to abandon the Navy auxiliary construction program.

Roberts made his statement in connection with a report to the Legion national executive committee in which he described as "false economy" proposals to trim appropriations for the Army and Navy.

Representative Millard (Republican), New York, ranking minority member of the House Naval Committee, said yesterday in Washington an agreement had been reached to delay, at least temporarily, a part of the naval construction program.

The Legion national defense committee's report, calling for a campaign by the Legion to bring about an adequate Army and Navy, was adopted unanimously by the executive committee.

Citizenship Asked.

London, May 6 (AP).—Harry Gordon Selfridge, who came from Chicago 30 years ago to found London's first department store on American lines, applied today for British citizenship with the observation he felt "more at home here."

Harry L. Cort Dies.

New York, May 6 (AP).—Harry L. Cort, 44, theatrical producer and writer, died today.

Flames Destroy Hindenburg on Her First Voyage to America in 1937

70 Passengers Booked For Quick Return Trip

Start Back to Germany Had Been Planned for Few Hours After Explosion; Ship Visited Washington in 1936.

The Hindenburg only this week resumed its North Atlantic commuting after a successful season last year which saw it complete ten voyages without accident or incident. In 1936 she first sailed on a regular schedule from Frankfort-am-Main, under the command of the famed Zeppelin designer, Commodore Hugo Eckener, with Capt. Ernest A. Lehman later in the season replacing Eckener as commander.

The giant dirigible was well known by sight to Washingtonians, who saw her when she flew over the Capital in August of 1936. She circled the Washington Monument and dipped in salute at the White House. This was on her sixth voyage to the United States. Capt. Lehman sent a message to President Roosevelt and greeted newsmen and hundreds of spectators. Thousands of Federal workers saw her from office windows and from the streets.

The Hindenburg was due to leave almost immediately for the return trip to Germany, carrying a capacity load of 70 passengers, among them the last contingent of visitors to the English coronation.

The commander hoped for a record trip, he said upon departure from Frankfort. He anticipated stopping in Lakehurst only four hours to unload passengers and cargo and resume the air for the back trip to Germany.

New arrangements were in effect at the Naval Air Station, according to Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, America's outstanding authority on lighter-than-air craft, at Lakehurst.

In charge at the field were Rosendahl and a new assistant, Comdr. Jesse L. Kenworthy, who is the station's new executive officer, replacing Lieut. Comdr. Reichelfelder.

Eckener Confident of Safety.

Dr. Eckener, veteran German airship designer, frequently expressed the opinion that the Hindenburg would prove to be the safest of all aircraft, as truly perfect a conqueror of time and the elements as man could make.

The largest of all airships was much "fatter" than the Graf Zeppelin, her gas capacity measuring 7,000,000 cubic feet as compared with the Graf's 2,708,000 cubic feet. She was powered with four Diesel motors capable of developing 1,200 horsepower each.

Considered the greatest product of the science of airship construction, the Hindenburg was the largest Zeppelin ever built—803 feet long. She had a top speed of 84 miles an hour. Its payload capacity of 15 tons was the largest combination of passengers, freight, and mail ever lifted off the ground by aircraft.

For years her designer, Eckener, sought to establish permanent bases for his air line in America and to perfect arrangements with the Navy Department for ample supplies of helium gas which is noninflammable and which is not available in Germany.

The Germans had enjoyed far greater success with their lighter-than-air craft than most nations, including the United States, and had complete confidence in their ability and reliability, and were counting on maintaining regular air service to the United States by Zeppelin in competition with heavier-than-air craft which was to be the backbone of other nations in the race for supremacy in transatlantic air service. The wrecking of the Hindenburg dealt the hopes of the Germans a heavy blow.

Until the explosion of the Hindenburg, Germany's record of thousands of miles of safe flight in her Zeppelins contrasted remarkably with disastrous attempts of the United States, Britain and other countries to develop lighter-than-air craft.

More than 400 persons had lost their lives in the last 30 years in previous peace time airship disasters but no serious accidents had befallen Zeppelins since 1913.

The Hindenburg carried 1,002 passengers and tons of mail in 1936. The date of her sailing this year on her maiden voyage of the season was pushed back from May 11 to May 13 in order to accommodate the requests of newsreel and photographic services, which wanted to have her bring pictures of the coronation back on her second trip to America.

Fourth Major Disaster.

The accident to the Hindenburg is the fourth major lighter-than-air disaster to take place on or near American shores. The first was the ill-fated Shenandoah, made in this country for the Navy. Disasters to the Akron and Macon, also Navy dirigibles, forced American military authorities to abandon lighter-than-aircraft construction in this country.

The experience of the Germans, however—until last night—had been vastly different. Germany, largely under Dr. Eckener's direction, built larger and still larger airships and navigated them to all parts of the earth without a major accident.

The Hindenburg made her maiden voyage in May, 1936, taking off from the home base at Friedrichshafen on the night of the sixth with 100 persons aboard.

Eight days later she was back at Frankfort, completing the first two-way crossing of the Atlantic by commercial airship.

The Zeppelin was equipped with a number of innovations in airship construction. The stern of the ship, which proved to be one of the weak spots in the Macon and Akron, American ships which came to fatal endings, was strengthened by three cross-section supports holding the frame vertically and horizontally.

Ten Tons of Water in Tanks.

The more than ten tons of water carried in the ship's tanks could be released in 50 seconds, should an emergency arise which would have necessitated a quick rise.

She was equipped with high-powered radio, both for code and voice transmission and reception. She carried a powerful 5,000,000-candlepower searchlight.

Twenty-five separate cabins, each containing two berths, made up the passenger quarters. Each was equipped with hot and cold running water. Below the sleeping quarters was a smoking room, crew's quarters and kitchen.

When she first took the air in 1935 the Hindenburg was lifted by hydrogen. Dr. Eckener as that time said he hoped to be able to replace the explosive gas with nonexplosive helium, but helium gas was very difficult to obtain in Germany, though plentiful here.

Eckener had said she was the strongest and fastest dirigible ever built. It was built under the direction of Dr. Ferdinand Duerr. Knut Eckener, son of the famous airman, served as assembly and erection chief.

As a "flying hotel," it was the most luxurious of the 150-odd airships built in the 36 years since Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin made his first historical dirigible flight.

Elaborate interior decorations, featured by murals depicting the history of aviation, embellished the spacious passenger quarters.

A promenade more than 150 feet long enclosed by unbreakable glass provided an unobstructed view in all directions.

Staterooms similar to those on ships were equipped with folding desks, and shower baths, with devices for measuring the consumption of water, which was distilled from air on the trip.

Carried Cars and Planes.

The airship had a completely equipped kitchen, with electric ranges and refrigerators and a large stock of linen, china and silverware.

The huge freight compartment would hold 24,000 pounds of baggage, and passengers were offered the service of taking along their cars or even light airplanes.

The ship was piloted from a forward gondola, separate from passenger quarters, where were the levers and switches controlling the dirigible's rudders and gas valves.

With a maximum speed of a little more than 84 miles an hour and a cruising range of 8,750 miles, the Hindenburg made ten scheduled trips between her home base and Lakehurst during 1936. All trips were completed approximately on schedule with few untoward incidents.

Over a course that measured 3,894 miles, ten westbound trips were made at an average of 64 and a fraction hours. Eastbound, the average was 52 and a fraction hours.

During the regularly scheduled trips the airship carried from 21 to 72 passengers and the popularity of the service made it necessary for her operators to install additional berth space.

During most of her trips the Hindenburg was manned by a crew of about 60 men and was in charge of Dr. Eckener, with Capt. Lehman in command.

Luther Leaves For Lakehurst In Special Plane

German Envoy Is 'Deeply Depressed' at 'National Catastrophe.'

His white head bowed in grief, Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, took off in a specially chartered plane for Lakehurst airport at 9:30 o'clock last night "to offer what assistance he could" to the victims of the Hindenburg disaster.

In his blue Stinson American Airlines ship were piles of luggage, filled with clothing for German friends of the Ambassador whose belongings were destroyed. Accompanying the diplomat was Gen. Frederick von Boetticher, air attache of the embassy.

Before going aboard the plane, the envoy told reporters:

"I am deeply depressed. It is a national catastrophe. It is especially a catastrophe because of the many lives that were lost. There were many Americans among the victims, and as Ambassador to the United States I am especially concerned over the deaths of the American passengers."

In his office when he first received the news, the Ambassador seemed stunned, as he paced back and forth, mumbling, "it's terrible, it's terrible," in great agitation.

He paused once to appeal to Americans, through the newsmen present, "not to lose confidence in lighter-than-air craft." He pointed out that German dirigibles had carried passengers for more than eight years without accident.

Dr. Luther expressed doubt the embassy would conduct any investigation separate from that of the Department of Commerce, but added "both Germans and Americans will do everything they can."

Shortly after news of the disaster reached the embassy from news associations, Secretary of Commerce Roper telephoned to express his sympathy. The two men are old friends. No word will be exchanged with Berlin until the news is officially authenticated, the embassy said.

Later last night the embassy stated it had received assurances Dr. Hugo Eckener was safe in Vienna. He expressed utmost confidence in the technical efficiency of the Hindenburg, which he said had been tested by more than a year of flying experience.

McNutts Entertained.

Manila, May 6 (AP).—New High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt and his wife and daughter were feted tonight at a reception by Vice President Sergio Osmena.

Man Who Saw Ship Come In Describes 'Terrific Explosion'

Shock Felt Throughout Neighborhood, Flames Shot Up, Observer Says; Dirigible Collapses With Tremendous Impact.

(The following eye-witness account of the burning of the dirigible was written by Robert J. Novins, a lawyer, who was 250 feet from the ship when she exploded.—Editor's note.)

By Robert J. Novins.
By the United Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 6.—I was about 250 feet from the dirigible as she was being moved toward the mobile mooring mast.

The dirigible had just dropped two or more lines and the ground crew had picked up the lines. I guess the hangar was about a quarter of a mile away.

The dirigible was about 300 feet off the ground and was coming in slowly when there was a terrific explosion that was felt throughout the neighborhood. Then flames shot up around the big gray hulk.

With her vast bag filled with highly inflammable hydrogen, the Hindenburg burned like tinder. A brilliantly reflected light spread across the field where the Hindenburg was swaying.

Then the long gray bulk collapsed with terrific impact.

Shortly before 8 o'clock she lay on the ground, half of her a mass of hot, twisted girders. The Hindenburg was covered in a thick cloud of smoke.

The ground crew was towing the dirigible toward the movable mooring mast when suddenly there was a spurt of flame from the middle section of the airship, a littl back from the exact center toward the rear.

When I saw that flame I started to run for the hangar.

A second later there was a terrific explosion and the whole airship appeared to be enveloped in flames.

The airship was about 75 feet off the ground at the time.

The flaming hulk collapsed to the ground.

It seemed as though some of the ground crew members were caught in the falling wreck.

I can't tell you any more about this now because they have taken all the telephones to call ambulances.

Hindenburg's Flight Made in Slow Time

By the Associated Press.

The Hindenburg had made slow progress in the transatlantic flight which ended in disaster at Lakehurst, N. J. It had been in the air more than 76 hours.

Its best time last year for a passage between Lakehurst and Frankfort-on-Main was slightly under 46 hours. The log of the Hindenburg's last trip follows (all in Eastern standard time):

3:25 p. m.—Over Cologne, Germany.
Tuesday:

2 p. m.—75 miles west of Scilly Islands.
Wednesday:
9 a. m.—600 miles east of St. Johns, N. F.
11 a. m.—250 miles northeast of Cape Race, N. F.
4 p. m.—75 miles southeast of Cape Race.

Inventor's Nephew Hints of Sabotage

Chicago, May 6.—Count C. G. von Zeppelin, 30, a nephew of the German inventor of the dirigible, in the United States on a business trip, expressed the opinion tonight the explosion of the Zeppelin Hindenburg might be a case of sabotage.

He added this was only conjecture and gleaned from early reports of the disaster.

In his Loop hotel room, he said he had read the explosion occurred in the stern of the ship and that the blast surged forward. He said there was nothing to cause an explosion in the rear of the ship since the gas cells were located in the middle third of Zeppelins.

Use of Lakehurst At Operators' Risk

By the Associated Press.

The United States Navy stipulated in advance that use of its facilities at Lakehurst were "entirely at the risk" of the operators of the dirigible Hindenburg.

An explanation of this Government's arrangements with the dirigible operators—granting them mooring and servicing facilities at the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., for their 1937 schedule—specified that:

"By the terms of the permit, the operators of the Hindenburg are granted permission to use certain airship facilities at Lakehurst not now in use by the Navy under conditions based on the general premise that the use thereof is entirely at the risk of the permitee and entirely without expense of responsibility on the part of the United States."

Forgotten Prisoners.

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial . . ."—The United Sates Constitution.

Reports that many prisoners have been kept in the District Jail for long periods awaiting trial indicate a shocking disregard of constitutional rights for which responsibility should be definitely fixed. When such flagrant injustice is committed in the name of law enforcement, the question of efficiency in the courts is immediately overshadowed by the larger issue of safeguarding human rights.

It is too often assumed that expeditious law enforcement means only the incarceration of more criminals. Of equal importance is the speedy release of suspected persons who prove to be innocent of the charges filed against them. Efficient law enforcement should mean greater protection for the underdog who does not know his rights as well as more certain punishment of the actual criminal. To punish individuals whose guilt has not been and possibly can not be proved is even more intolerable than to leave a high percentage of crimes unsolved.

The Parole Board has just voted to release on parole ten men convicted, along with the notorious Sam Beard, of conspiracy to violate the District anti-gambling law. These men have been imprisoned a year for their offense, only one month longer than has been served by two men in the District Jail who have not been convicted of the charges on which they are held. If the latter prisoners are finally convicted, moreover, they are not likely to be given any credit for the time already served.

Aside from the acute injustice of such sloppy procedure, it suggests that the District's machinery of prosecution is operated in a most haphazard fashion. Indeed, this is not the first time that the plight of forgotten prisoners has been brought to public attention. The jail is often overcrowded by men who should either be definitely convicted or freed. Individuals arrested for crimes in the District must wait, on the average, from seven to eight weeks for disposition of their cases in court. Baltimore is reported to have reduced the average period between arrests and court action to two weeks.

The sharp criticism of District law enforcement agencies by the Congressional crime committee two years ago was apparently more effective in arousing public opinion than in correcting the weaknesses in our law enforcement system. Fortunately a permanent agency is now at work in this field. The Criminal Justice Association has a unique opportunity to keep public opinion centered upon this disgraceful situation until it is cleared up.

The Employment Service.

If they take their cue from the modest attitude of the Federal employment service officers here, delegates of the International Association of Public Employment Services now assembled in Washington will do little to advertise their meetings.

The convention, however, deserves attention. For one reason, the association is observing its twenty-fifth anniversary, which speaks persuasively for the maturity of the public employment service development in this country. Canada, whose delegates to the convention give the association its international aspect, has naturally had a long-standing interest in labor exchanges through its connection with England. But the United States as a whole had slight concern for public employment offices prior to the depression. It will reassure many to learn that the subject has none the less been receiving organized scientific study for a quarter of a century.

A deeper significance of the convention arises from the fact that employment offices in the United States are about to undergo a great expansion. Social security has come to be accepted as a Government responsibility. And the State offices will soon be called upon to act as paying agents for unemployment compensation benefits.

It is this last assignment that is a particular concern of the convention delegates assembled here. The vast clerical operations involved threaten to tax the offices to the detriment of their job-placement programs. The payment of unemployment benefits is a logical function of a public employment service. But it must not be permitted so to burden the offices that they are forced to neglect their original and important task of bringing men—and the right men—into communication with possible employers.

Two On The Chin.

The last two days have seen two of the most powerful indictments yet brought against the scheme to pack the Supreme Court. They are important for another reason besides their own merits, and the stature of the critics. They demonstrate that the more time taken for consideration of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal, the more intolerable it becomes.

Senator O'Mahoney's notable speech on Wednesday night was the fruit of careful, conscientious and courageous deliberation. The senior Senator from Wyoming is a distinguished leader of the Democratic Party. In the early days of the Roosevelt regime he held high administrative office as First Assistant Postmaster General. He still regards himself as "an earnest advocate of the President's policies."

But after studying the court proposal objectively for three months he is forced to the conclusion that it stands revealed "as an utterly foolish gesture, so far as immediate needs are concerned, and as an extremely dangerous innovation as regards our constitutional system."

Both these assertions Senator O'Mahoney proved to the hilt. By reference to the obliteration which overwhelmed the Federalists when they sponsored a much less drastic tampering with the judiciary the Senator also sounded a helpful warning to power-drunk members of his party. But his most telling point was his quotation of that section of the constitution of Wyoming which states the unquestionable principle that "arbitrary power exists nowhere in a republic, not even in the largest majority."

As Senator O'Mahoney points out, it is precisely that prohibited arbitrary power which the President now seeks to seize. The combination of a subservient court and a huge legislative majority is all that is needed to make the Chief Executive an absolute dictator, in fact if not in name. This Democratic leader deserves the gratitude of all liberty-loving Americans for emphasizing again that "if the independence of the courts is not maintained, all guarantees of freedom and justice vanish."

It is not, as he says, "in any sense a partisan question. It is the most fundamental question of basic Americanism which has been presented to the Congress in a generation."

Equally significant, though couched in non-controversial language and approaching the issue only indirectly, were the comments made by Chief Justice Hughes in his address before the American Law Institute yesterday.

For the second time, bringing his statistics up to May 1, Mr. Hughes completely disposed of the President's wholly untenable assertion that the Supreme Court "is forced by the sheer necessity of keeping up with its business to decline, without even an explanation, to hear 87 per cent of the cases presented to it by private litigants."

Thus far during the current term, the Chief Justice pointed out, the court has "granted 123 petitions for certiorari and denied 583." It is true that this percentage of denials is still as high as 82, but that has nothing to do with pressure of work. The Supreme Court, as Mr. Hughes said yesterday, always grants certiorari if four "and not infrequently when three, or even two, justices urge the grant."

The court-packing scheme is not likely to be clumsily camouflaged again by repetition of the charge that the present tribunal is overburdened. The Chief Justice has now finally ended such allegations by stating publicly that "the court is fully up with its work" and is experiencing "no inordinate or unjustified delays." But this time he went further than in his letter to Senator Wheeler.

All those who heard Mr. Hughes' address must have applied to the current issue his testimonial to the late Elihu Root as one whose method was "to marshal the forces of intelligence in order to meet a specific need in a sensible fashion." All those who heard the Chief Justice summarize measures already taken to improve judicial procedure must have contrasted them with the slapdash, superficial, devious and damnably dangerous proposal now before the country.

Elihu Root, said Mr. Hughes, "was great because he was wise." The implications of that observation can profitably be coupled with Senator O'Mahoney's conclusion that every argument for the court-packing scheme "has dissolved on the very tongues of its advocates."

Not Our Jim.

Dispatches from Texas reporting the ichthic incidents of the President's vacation have mentioned from time to time a man by the name of Farley. And unthinkingly, though there was no mention of green ink or complimentary postage stamps, we took the name to mean the Postmaster General. We visualized Our Jim as bobbing about in a boat off Corpus Christi, attentive as always to "the Chief's" every whim. We had even gone so far as to wonder whether the notable Farlesian pate was being properly protected against the sun.

But now this vision has been properly blasted. The Farley mentioned in the dispatches can not be The Farley. The gentleman in question, it appears on closer inquiry, is "a veteran fishing guide." Even without this explicit identification we should have known, however, that it was not the P. M. G. For earlier in the week the President was greatly disappointed at losing a tarpon he had hooked. The reason, according to the report, was that "Farley missed the gaff as the fish was brought alongside."

James Aloysius Farley miss a gaff? Perish the thought! In something more than four years, as many will testify, he has never missed landing a Senator, Representative or any one else for whom the President was fishing.

One Way To Cut Relief Costs.

Administrator Hopkins told a House subcommittee on appropriations that a cut of $500,000,000 in relief funds would necessitate dropping more than 400,000 relief workers. He added that $1,500,000,000 was essential to keep from 1,500,000 to 1,700,000 persons employed. These computations indicate that he expects relief outlays to average a little more than $80 per month for each man employed.

A year ago Mr. Hopkins testified that the cost of working a man in the WPA for a month amounted to about $65, including overhead charges. Local communities were then contributing on the average of about $15 per month per man, raising the total per capita cost of work relief to $80 per month. At that rate Mr. Hopkins ought to be able to support 1,500,000 persons, without local aid, for a cost of $1,440,000,000.

At this rate, however, it is evident that the system of work relief is extremely costly as compared with systems of direct relief where the amount paid is based upon need. Mr. Hopkins estimated a year ago, for instance, that the average amount paid out per family for direct relief amounted to between $33 and $34 per month. On that basis, it would be possible to provide for 2,500,000 families at an expenditure of about $1,000,000,000. Of course, we shall never be able to cut the relief appropriation if per capita allowances continue to rise and excuses are always found for a failure to reduce relief rolls as rapidly as employment rises.

It is true that the WPA and other government agencies are taking care of only part of the able-bodied unemployed. With some jobs going to idle non-relief workers and with an estimated 800,000 new workers coming into the labor market yearly, Mr. Hopkins concludes that we shall have a large number of persons unemployed in 1937, presupposing "nearly as great a need for a Federal works program as in 1936."

If we accept his premise that the Government owes jobs to these idle men whether it can afford to finance the program or not, this argument sounds plausible. But since the WPA program is creating a serious fiscal problem, without providing an adequate solution or indeed any solution for the problem of chronic unemployment, it is a different matter.

As often said by critics of this wasteful work relief policy, the alternative is not starvation for the unemployed. On the contrary, with a smaller outlay many persons now unable to obtain WPA jobs or to secure adequate direct relief could be decently provided for according to their differing necessities. The present policy, while purporting to be conducive to heightened morale, really favors one group of idle workers at the expense of others.

Nobody knows just how many unemployed remain to be absorbed into industry, but we do know that the emergency which gave rise to the work-relief program is well past its acute stage. Employment in the manufacturing industries is estimated to be back to 1929 levels and in many lines of activity production is higher than in that year. If we are unable to reduce relief outlays to reasonable totals under such conditions, the outlook will be indeed gloomy in case of a future business recession.

The time has come to dismantle the costly work relief machinery unless the country is prepared to face the prospect of a permanent WPA, as Mr. Hopkins evidently does. In his recent report on progress of the works program, he asserts that "for the more distant future a large volume of unemployment seems likely and 4,000,000 unemployed probably represents the minimum to be expected even during periods of prosperity." While admitting that no single program will take care of the idle, he concludes that "persons unemployed for protracted periods would receive income through works programs."

This is fair warning that Mr. Hopkins will be as ready to protest next year as he was this year and last year against a retrenchment program that involves substantial curtailment of WPA activities. If Congress is determined to economize it cannot possibly act on his advice.

If you don't hold that a sort of spirit of perverseness pervades mundane matters, how do you explain, for instance, the fact that a person who snores never suffers from insomnia?

Food For Fighters.

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

At last one gleam of common sense appears in Nazi policy, even if it is forced upon Germany by Nazi nuttiness. Germany has ordered bakers to put 7 per cent of cornmeal in every loaf of bread, and the Teutons are assured that even 10 per cent of cornmeal will not hurt the bread.

They might make it 100 per cent and get even better bread. We used to think so in the South when there were still cooks who could make hoecake and corn pone—and make them right.

We are not interested in giving any tips to the German general staff, but if they will consult Dr. Charles Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., he may tell them that corn pone, black-eyed peas and sorghum molasses are an ideal ration for fighting men. We once heard Dr. Charles say that Stonewall Jackson's "foot cavalry" in the valley of Virginia, fed on that ration, had just the right grub for hiking and fighting.

The Memorial Debate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading the "Editorial of The Day" printed in the Chicago Tribune I was shocked that anyone could have the temerity to even think of destroying the famous cherry trees of Washington. It seems to me a sacrilege and I hope in some way it may be prevented.

My daughter and I have wanted to visit Washington for some time but have been unable to do so. I am sure that the despoiling of the Tidal Basin would make us very unhappy. Why so much fuss over monuments anyway? They are never very beautiful and soon are ignored. We hope you will successfully wage a war against the project.

IDA E. WYCHOFF.
Glen Ellyn, Ill., May 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for publishing Will Collier's letter. It gives us a new angle on the Jefferson Memorial debate, as staged in your columns.

The following statements from the valiant cherry-tree defenders are a dead give-away: "A structure larger than the Lincoln Memorial;" "a structure that will detract from the beauty of the Lincoln Memorial," etc. The $3,000,000 Jefferson Shrine fight in Washington, far eclipses in intensity the $30,000,000 Jefferson Shrine fight in St. Louis. Why? In plain English, right at this time, while the fortunes of the Republican Party are in the balance, it would be a faux pas to add to the prestige of the Democratic Party by permitting the building of a memorial to "the father of American Democracy" here in the Nation's Capital that would dwarf the Greek Temple on the Potomac. In a way it would strengthen the hands of the "New Dealers."

New York's 'Vigilantes.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Replying to a letter by "Aristotle" in which he denounces Vigilantes, Democrats and Republicans, one suspects the writer of having in mind a different type of government. If he can formulate a man-made plan which will prove beyond doubt to be a government less greedy for gain and more noble-minded, I wish he would unfold his plan.

The political science of Aristotle, the Greek, deals with the life of a state conceived as a government having for its object the highest good for the people. His theories, empirical, were based on experience and history. He set forth that common ownership presents no end of disputes, attributable to human wickedness. The modern "Aristotle" might consider it more expedient to propose a system of government which admits of human weakness and to reconstruct democracy, which the Greek allowed had good points, rather than test new methods.

Few citizens approve the formation of a band of men who take the law in their own hands and call themselves Vigilantes. As a moral organization it is not justifiable. However, what they accomplished in stamping out cattle thefts was of enormous benefit to the West.

I do not think that the Ku Klux Klan can be measured with the Vigilantes inasmuch as the Klan uses secret, terrifying methods whereas the Vigilantes proclaimed open and announced warfare against cattle thieves.

Today's formation of Vigilantes is not to be taken literally. The title should be interpreted by what the name implies. Watchfulness. A careful vigil of criminal organization, with the purpose of undermining their strategy and to uncover the faultiness in the application of criminal law.

Kultur For Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to say that your editorial of April 30 on "Kultur for Spain" may have elicited praise from some, but to me it was just another evidence of the bias and one-sidedness of newspapermen on the Spanish situation.

You refer to the bloody deeds perpetrated by Gen. Mola, assisted by Moors, Italians and Germans. Naturally any decent-minded and liberty-loving person is horrified at such brutal killings. I, personally, do in no way condone such inhuman acts of manslaughter. But is it just the nationalists who are entirely responsible for such crimes? Aren't the loyalists just as equally to be blamed? For instance, how do we so soon forget the demolition of the century-famed Alcazar with its inhabitants; the savage butchery of hostages; the dynamiting of occupied hospitals and buildings?

Then, too, there are other countries involved in the Spanish civil war besides Italy and Germany. Why don't the newspapers likewise strongly denounce France and Russia for sending men and armaments into Spain and for prolonging such a devilish warfare?

In your editorial you state that "Rebel planes of German make, manned, the Basque government charges, by Nazi fliers, have systematically and ruthlessly bombarded unfortified towns such as Guernica." But another secular paper, referring to the bombardment, has this to say: "An inspection of the ruined town (Guernica) by foreign correspondents failed to disclose any of the usual marks of an air raid in the streets." What are we to make of such accounts?

Let us not be deceived by propagandists' reports. If we have to give statements, let us be fair and guided by truth, and give at least an impartial account of both sides of the appalling situation.

Ireland's Declaration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every American with an Irish ancestry, every true American of whatsoever background, every person anywhere that believes in democracy, liberty and the right of self-government, feels profound satisfaction in the great news from Ireland.

It is something for all forward-looking men and women in the world to contemplate with joy and hope renewed that after 700 years of struggle these people have at last won their freedom.

It is something to make all hearts dance with delight that now, after 134 years, Robert Emmet's epitaph can be written.

It is something to be thought of with a solemn exultation that there has come at last the realization of the hope for which so many martyrs gave up their lives.

It is something for the earnest pondering of all of us that exactly 21 years after the heroes of the Easter uprising were put to death, the cause they perished for has triumphed. What could be of deeper moral significance? Behold now how futile are drum-head courts-martial, firing squads, gibbets, prison cells, exiles, proscriptions, guns, fleets, battleships, parading armies, all the force and pomp and show of imperialism, against the power of a great moral idea. When the Easter uprising had been crushed, when Sir John Maxwell's stupid court-martial had done its deadly work, the imperialists thought the cause of Ireland permanently defeated. We can see now that it was only entering its final victory. The blood of the men that were shot that week in Dublin (we see now) was the seed from which has sprung the Irish Republic, free, sovereign, democratic.

In those days soldiers of imperialism tore to pieces and spat upon the proclamation in which Padraic Pearse gave to the world the Declaration of Irish Independence. Today that declaration has become in effect the law of the land.

Who can stay the wheels of progress? Who can exterminate in a people's heart the passion to be free?

The Dies-Kerr-Coolidge Alien Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The thirteenth "revised" Kerr-Coolidge bill was introduced on April 14 by Representative Martin Dies, of Texas. He led the successful fight in the House on June 15, 1934, against this proposed legislation to substitute an alien administration or government of persons for the existing government of definite written laws in most alien deportation and immigration restriction matters.

This new Kerr-Coolidge bill now sponsored by Representative Dies was reported by the House Committee on Immigration the day after it was introduced and really before even printed copies were available to the public. No hearings have been held on it. Hearings were not possible owing to the hot haste with which it was reported.

To be sure, hearings have been held on 3 of the 12 previous drafts of this un-American legislative proposal to make the Secretary of Labor and Commissioner of Immigration autocrats in "allowing to remain in the U. S." certain lawbreakers that she or he "find" of "good character," etc.

This dictatorial, regal, autocratic authority and excessive power has been sought by the present Secretary of Labor ever since she took an oath to "faithfully execute the laws" of the U. S. four years ago. It has not only been sought intensely and extensively, even by paid propagandists but this really legislative power has been actually usurped by her. She has "stayed" the deportations of thousands of alien lawbreakers, even forgers, dope peddlers, a killer, prostitutes and the like, as shown by press articles, by Representative Starnes, of Alabama, in the House and by Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, in the Senate, after an examination of the files of these "stayed" cases, all three actually citing the specific cases and specific crimes committed.

The real solution for the relief of hardship cases is the one that has been used for years and every year. Last year among the private bills for the relief of deportable aliens reported after hearings, that became law, was one extending mercy even to an alien who had committed two felonies in trying to get into the U. S. ahead of her quota turn. Congress can be depended upon in the future, as in the past, to grant relief if the department and the alien will only present their cases to Congress. Congress should retain control of our immigration and deportation policies and not delegate any such autocratic discretion as the Dies-Kerr-Coolidge bill contains to not enforce the law against certain lawbreakers the Secretary "thinks" of "good character" and who have "found" here a spouse or some other near relative.

The Dies-Kerr-Coolidge bill would also confer autocratic discretions to legalize all illegal alien entries between 1921 and 1924. Since 1921 we have had quota legislation and there is no real excuse for any aliens who entered the U. S. conscientiously and legally not being able to prove his legal entry. The department's original proposal was to confer full authority to legalize all illegal alien entries past and future!

We have the weakest immigration laws and administration of those laws of any great country. Even our "good neighbors" on the north and south have far more rigid law enforcement as Representative Dies and others repeatedly pointed out. What we need is not law relaxation and less mandatory immigration and alien deportation legislation, but more efficient law enforcement and more legislation.

The Dies-Kerr-Coolidge alien importation bill should be defeated.

The Vanishing Alien

From an address by Edward J. Shaughnessy, Acting Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, before the National Council on Naturalization and Citizenship.

IN 1905, 1906, 1907, 1910, 1913 and 1914, we admitted to the United States more than a million aliens each year. Naturally, we had shortly thereafter a very large resident alien population. However, the picture was changed decidedly during the last decade.

The 1920 census showed 7,430,909 aliens not naturalized residing in the United States. The 1930 census showed 6,284,613, a decrease of 1,146,196. This tremendous decrease during this decade, approximately 15 per cent, occurred in spite of the fact that during each of the 10 fiscal years from 1920 to 1929, inclusive, there migrated to the United States from a minimum of 279,678 to a minimum of 805,228 aliens. We now estimate that during the last seven fiscal years, 1930 to 1936, the alien population has further decreased by approximately 2,000,000 persons.

Let us analyze the elements which go to make a decrease in alien population. We find four; emigrations naturalizations; derivative citizenship of minors through the naturalization of parents and wives through husbands, and deaths.

In 1930, 241,700 aliens were admitted to the United States. However, during the succeeding six years we find the following admissions: in 1931, 97,139; in 1932, 35,576; in 1933, a new low of 23,068; in 1934, 29,470; in 1935, 34,956; in 1936, 36,329. In other words during the last seven years we have admitted 498,239 aliens, as compared with 4,295,510 for the preceding 10 years. Stated differently, the average yearly immigration for the past seven years was 71,177, as compared with 429,551 for the preceding 10-year period. For the last six years of this seven-year period, the annual average dropped to 44,090.

During the last seven-year period, in which 498,238 aliens were admitted, 410,341 emigrated, or an excess of arrivals over departures of 87,897. During the preceding 10-year period, there was an excess of arrivals over departures of 3,012,780.

But there are other features to be considered: the naturalizations, derivative citizenships and deaths. Let me give you a few totals: For the 20-year period from 1917 to 1936, 5,340,901 aliens were recorded as immigrants; 1,977,455 as having departed; 3,175,116 were naturalized; an estimated 1,110,100 derived citizenship either through naturalization of the father or the husband; there was an estimated total of 2,454,301 deaths. Recapitulating, we find that during this 20-year period a total of 8,716,972 persons either left the country, became naturalized, derived citizenship through someone else naturalization or died, as contrasted with 5,340,901 immigrants.

The late Secretary William N. Doak estimated that there were not more than 100,000 aliens illegally in the country and subject to deportation; the late Commissioner MacCormack, after a survey of the situation a year or two ago, reached the conclusion that this estimate was more nearly accurate than other estimates.

Why do we need any new legislation when we have a whole book of immigration laws? We need more law to give us authority, on the one hand, to deport many criminal aliens not now subjected to deportation, and, on the other hand, to permit aliens of good character who are here in more or less technical violation of law to remain, particularly in cases where they have American citizen families and where deportation would amount to making public charges of these dependent relatives.

* * * *

Many people have asked me to give them a brief idea of the substance of proposed legislation. In most instances, the citation of but one example has been sufficient to convince them of the necessity of a law which will supply the necessary balance now lacking in the immigration set-up.

I take the cases of aliens A and B. A is a person who has been in the United States for possibly 15 years and has spent a great proportion of that time in penal institutions. However, he was not sentenced within five years after his entry to imprisonment for a year or more for a crime involving moral turpitude, nor has he, during his 15-year period of residence, been sentenced on more than one occasion to a period of one year or more for crimes involving moral turpitude. He is, nevertheless, a confirmed criminal, a social menace and clearly should be deported. Yet, because of the extreme technicalities of existing law concerning the expulsion of criminals, he is immune from deportation.

Let us now take the case of B. B entered the United States in the latter part of 1924 as a non-immigrant international trader. As an international trader, it was necessary for him to conduct a business involving a preponderance of international trade. But in the course of time, the business developed in such a manner that he eventually found himself a domestic merchant. He, therefore, failed to maintain his status as a non-immigrant international trader and automatically became subject to deportation. He is a man of excellent character and has acquired an American citizen family dependent upon him.

I ask inquisitors which one they would prefer to deport, A or B. They immediately say they would deport A and leave B here, and I tell them that under the law we must deport B and cannot deport A. This situation is ridiculous. The legislation we propose would correct this condition.

Fair Enough

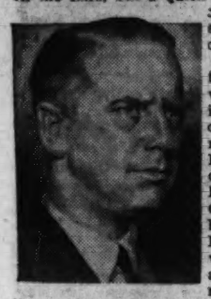
Twenty-Five Years Ago.

THE SUPPRESSION of dirty burlesque may strike some of our citizens as more oppression by the same blue-nosed witch-hangers who inflicted prohibition on the land, but a quick canvass will show that the country is much more tolerant today than it was 20 or 25 years ago.



Prize fighting was then forbidden in many States which now permit the slashing tigers to attack each other with furious lefts and rights to the face and body. Horse racing was narrowed down to New York, Maryland, Kentucky and New Orleans, and had shortly before been forbidden in New York. Sunday baseball was illegal in New York, and dog racing, with the mechanical bunny luring the feeble-minded hound, was not yet known.

The greyhound's forehead recedes so quickly that he can scarcely be said to have any forehead at all, and that may explain why he continues to chase the synthetic rabbit which is such an obvious fraud that even the dog race bettors know at a glance that it is artificial. That means that the pretense must be very apparent, because the dog-race gambler, next to the slot-machine gambler, is the most gullible type that the human race has ever produced.

Nowadays both the dogs and slots operate openly in many localities, either with or without the sanction of the law. In places where they violate the law they pay graft to the dominant political organization or to the prosecutor, sheriff and chief of police individually. Everybody knows all about this, but people are so tolerant now that it is considered quite all right for public officials to sell off the privilege of robbing the citizens.

• • • •

THE STRICT MORALS of the Nation began to relax shortly after the war. It may be hard to realize it now, but in 1919 New York was a very straitlaced city. Racing was just barely permitted and was looked upon as a small sin, but betting was illegal and, therefore, more or less clandestine. The ball clubs drew their schedules so as to avoid Sundays in New York and prize fighting was officially immoral.

Then Jimmy Walker put through a Sunday baseball law and followed this with his prize-fight law—two feats of liberal legislation which later made him mayor. His prize-fight law permitted 15-round decision bouts and it almost ruined the fight business in Philadelphia and the nearby Jersey cities which permitted short no-decision fights. At that time fighting was legal in the twin cities of Minnesota and in Milwaukee, but Chicago was not to have legal fights or racing for several years.

There were some small fights in Texas, but all persons implicated in these productions took a chance of going to jail for violation of a law adopted by a special session of the Legislature in 1898.

The Texans were intensely moral in some respects in the wild and woolly days of '98, and when it was proposed to present the Corbett-Fitzsimmons bout there the Legislature was summoned for the sole purpose of passing a law against this disgraceful spectacle. So the show was finally moved up into Nevada, whose State motto always has been "Anything goes." Nevada is remarkably honest about all such matters.

Up to a few years ago Virginia's anti-prize fight law was so strict that even the spectators could be sent to prison, and the possession of a set of gloves could be interpreted as evidence of intent to commit a grievous offense against the peace and dignity of the State.

• • • •

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO it was beyond imagining that Ohio would permit racing with open betting, and these sinful devices seemed to have been cast out of the New England States forever. Since then, however, New Hampshire, of all States, has felt a stir of sporting blood and has legalized racing with mutuels, and there are tracks in Massachusetts and Rhode Island as well. Massachusetts even has dog races, and good old Maine, which repealed prohibition after many years, gambles in pools on the trotters.

A backward glance reveals that restrictions existed 20 or 25 years ago which would be considered intolerable now. There were contradictions, of course. For example, Chicago, about as tough and incorrigible as any city in American history, endured open gambling and two notorious patches of brothels while enforcing laws against fights and races. Now Chicago has everything, including nakedness in the shows, and still some of the people complain because they have to live in slums.

Devotees of burlesque should not take on too hard. This is a new country and liberties are slowly won, but perhaps in 20 years civilization will have advanced so far that the foulest entertainment of the present day will be regarded as fit material for class entertainment in the public schools. Give us time.

Immortal Poet

By William Lyon Phelps

Browning's Birthday.

We always love those authors the most who have done the most for us, and while I know that Browning is not so great as Shakespeare, his poetry and the reflection of his personality have been such a tremendous influence in my life that I can never be sufficiently grateful to him. And I feel so strongly that every one ought to read Browning and get from him the happiness and delight and the faith in life that I have got from him that, if I thought it would do any good, I would stand on the street corner of a big city and stop every person who came along with the question, "Have you read Browning?"

• • • •

But I know well enough that this is not the way to achieve the desired result, and also I should probably be arrested.

What I mean is simply this: Browning was a very great poet, an immortal poet, and his poetry is to me a continuous delight because of the revelation of the various aspects of human nature that it displays; but entirely apart from its artistic aspect and from its value as poetry and music, Browning himself had such a tremendous personality that I feel in reading him as if I were in contact with a power that is almost infinite. In other words, his personality is a quickening force. It is like a transfusion of blood.

Coward's Success.

Not content with writing scores of plays and the words and music to scores of musical comedies, not content with acting in many of these plays and with playing the piano and singing in many of the musical pieces, the amazing Noel Coward has just published his autobiography, with the excellent title "Present Indicative."

If you think he is too young to write an autobiography, you are mistaken; for, although he is still in his 30s, he has already lived longer in activity than most men in their 80s.

• • • •

Although it is well known that there is no easy or royal road to success, I had honestly believed that Noel Coward was the exception that proved the rule. I saw him nearly ten years ago in the famous Ivy Restaurant in London, entertaining a whole party of professionals at luncheon, himself the very embodiment of success; and he looked in years like a boy.

Indeed he has had such immense success for so many years that I had supposed he had made the bell ring from the very start; but after reading this autobiography, my respect for his courage has risen. Like nearly all successful men, he passed through years of agonizing struggles with failure, apparent hopelessness and poverty.

• • • •

When we remember how enormous his financial income has been for so long a time, it seems strange (and it must seem even stranger to him) to remember that for months he was in a foreign country, New York, sitting in the Battery Park, hobnobbing with hoboes, without a nickel in his pocket and with not the slightest prospect of getting one.

Well, this is also true of the brilliant and popular young Mr. Coward, and I had always thought success had fallen on him like manna from heaven.

Germany On Colonies

London Correspondent Reports Success Of German Propaganda In "Selling" Third Reich To Britain Blasted By Demands.

By D. W. Brogan.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

AMONG the most successful propaganda jobs of modern times has been the "selling" of the new Germany to the British public. The first reactions to the establishment of the Third Reich were decidedly hostile, a hostility which the burning of the Reichstag and, later, the purge of June 30 did little to diminish. Even before the advent of Hitler, there had been a constant flow of German propaganda directed to winning the British public to a recognition of the soundness of German claims, a propaganda sometimes adroit, sometimes candid, sometimes neither. Nevertheless, it had had success.

The number of Englishmen, for example, who realized that there was a Polish case for the "Corridor," as well as a German case against it was so small that a meeting of these heretics could easily have been housed in the tip of the Washington Monument. In left-wing circles, it was to be regarded as definitely tainted, to harbor ideas that cast the slightest doubt on the pacifist democracy of the vast majority of the German people or to wonder, openly, whether the Treaty of Versailles was born in such utter iniquity that it had no good points, even if those good points were made at the expense of Germany.

The advent of the new regime changed all that and, for a year or so, the British public, it it did not slip back to 1914, suspended judgment. Propagandists like the incredible Rosenberg did not help to redress the balance of opinion and the new Germany started life encircled psychologically if not yet diplomatically.

Situation Changed In Past Three Years.

IN THE LAST three years that situation has been altered. Lead-newspapers like the (London) Times which once talked of a "Government by gangsters" settled down to accepting as a natural feature of the landscape the new order of things.

Visitors to Germany came back full of enthusiasm for a regime that had worked wonders. Had not the Fuehrer abolished lipstick? The improved moral tone of Germany even before the removal of Capt. Rohm) was a talking point for the new order as potent as those punctual Italian trains were for Mussolini. Anti-Jewish legislation was explained away (an apologist for Herr Streicher is still lacking, however). The motives of the Christian opposition to Bishop Muller and his successors were sneered at.

And quite a good job was done in selling new Germany to the old maids, retired colonels, country parsons and the like who are so numerous in England, so open to certain types of moral propaganda and so incapable of critical study of any question. It was possible, indeed natural, to believe that the British were the real children of Israel and that the German Jews were imposters. The revival of Odin and Thor and the retranslation of the Psalms into German folk-hyms was too much to be swallowed but, after all, the Germans were foreigners (even if nice, clean, respectful foreigners—not like those nasty French) and all foreigners are silly. It is easy to laugh at such people, but they are often the backbone of the local Conservative Association and while it is not enough to have Tonbridge Wells or Cheltenham on your side, it is something.

Realists And Fascists Won Easily By Propaganda.

MORE SERIOUS conquests were made in certain circles in London with a Fascist bent, hostile to Russia and consequently to France, partisans of "strong government." This set was overlapped by another which denied Fascist sympathies as such, but took a "realist view" which involved a deal with Germany, a free hand to this oppressed people and a western Europe ignoring any awkward accidents east of the Rhine.

The Old Faithful of British journalism, Mr. J. L. Garvin, of the weekly Observer, boiled over regularly on this subject, and it is worth noting that however limited the influence of Mr. Garvin is his paper is the property of Lord Astor and the Astors are rumored to be connected with a set inclined to take a every kindly view of the Reich.

Along with this definite acceptance of the German point of view (or of its more presentable aspects) went the great body of pacifist opinion. Men of the left wing in politics, whatever their theoretical bias against fascism, usually had a sincere horror of war and many also had acquired what was practically a conditioned reflex on the subject of the virtues of Germany and the sins of France. For them history began in 1923 with the invasion of the Ruhr, and men and women who could and can find kind words for both Stalin and Trotsky still go white with anger at the mention of Poincare.

In this attitude there was, of course, a war hang-over, a bitter repentance of acceptance of war propaganda, a memory that that propaganda has been directed against Germany and a simple resolution not to believe anything that was said hostile to Germany in 1934 because much that was untrue had been said in 1914.

Formula Worked Well On Confused Englishmen.

ON THESE CONFUSED but, in bulk, important masses of public opinion German propaganda worked well. It did not, except in definitely Fascist circles, defend the anti-Semitism of the regime; it was soon discovered that a great deal of the mystical jargon that sounds as if it means something in German syllables means nothing in English, or is funny. What was done to the English edition of "Mein Kampf" was done to the general run of German propaganda in Britain; it was castrated, and the job of castration was well done.

As a result of this competent job British foreign policy was made even more confused than it otherwise would have been—which is saying a good deal. Even assuming, for a moment, that the Foreign Office had one mind of its own, it could not impose that mind on the country. A definite acceptance of the German point of view, "a free hand in eastern Europe," would not only have angered the trade unions which, for obvious reasons have been deaf to all German pipings, but it would have startled old-fashioned Tories. They love the balance of power more than they hate bolshevism. They dislike the German regime for snobbish reasons almost as much as they do the Soviet regime. And they remembered that a free hand to Germany was a free hand to Japan, too.

On the other hand, a public announcement that if Germany attacked Czechoslovakia, Britain would be in on the side of France in the European war that would follow, if it appealed to another set of realists who believed that such a threat would avert war, was impossible in face of the combined pro-German and pacifist bloc. Thus, while everyone knows that the present re-armament panic is caused by Germany; that it is thought of German bombers that keeps or should keep Mr. Baldwin awake at night, no one says so, in public at any rate. We are preparing against the Ruritanian danger. Mars, too, looks pretty menacing, but as for any suggestion that Germany is our nightmare, perish the thought, and another billion dollars of weapons is ordered to help the thought to perish quickly.

Britain Seen Steering Blind Course Into Future.

SO WE MAKE an Anglo-German naval treaty which infuriates the French; and we send polite but searching questions as a reply to the vague and ambiguous peace offers of the Fuehrer, which angers the Germans. Steering (as the Mayor of Muddleton said) "between the Scylla of partiality on the one hand and the Charybdis of impartiality on the other," British policy gives an impression of uncertainty and feebleness. This, on the whole, must gratify the shrewder heads in Berlin which know that an open, defined and certain British policy would inevitably be based on an even closer connection with France than at present and, whatever its intent, could not fail to seem and to be anti-German.

In such circumstances, the wise German policy would be to give Britain an abundance of the old oil and avoid raising any awkward questions that might enable the wobbling British mind to settle. That wise counsel has been disregarded and the Germans are busy undoing their own work by asking for colonies.

English Soldiers Kill 200 Indian Tribesmen

Simla, India, May 6 (U.P.).—Two hundred Waziristan tribesmen have been killed and 157 wounded since April 23 in a punitive expedition by British troops into the Khaisora area, it was estimated today.

Britain sent 33,000 troops into the northwest area because of repeated raids by tribesmen.

Compromises

By R. M. Boeckel

History In The United States.

All suggestions for compromise on his court reform bill have been rejected by the President. He is said to prefer an unfavorable report from the Judiciary Committee to a report recommending a compromise measure. This would not close the way to compromise on the floor at a later stage, if test votes show that the plan had no chance of adoption in its original form.

THE CONSTITUTION for the United States of America, formulated at Philadelphia 150 years ago, has frequently been described as "a bundle of compromises." But, says the historian, Charles Beard, it was more: "It was a mosaic of second choices accepted in the interest of union and the substantial benefits to flow from union."

At least three times during the summer of 1787 conflicts arose in the Constitutional Convention which made it seem impossible to proceed further, but on each occasion apparently irreconcilable differences were smoothed over by compromise. On September 17, the day of signing, Benjamin Franklin said:

"I confess there are several parts of this Constitution which I do not at present approve, but I am not sure I shall never approve them. For I have lived long, I have experienced many instances of being obliged by better information or fuller consideration, to change opinions even on important subjects, which I once thought right, but found to be otherwise . . . Thus, I consent, Sir, to this Constitution, because I expect no better, and because I am not sure that it is not the best . . . On the whole, Sir, I cannot help expressing a wish that every member of the convention who may still have objections to it, would, with me on this occasion, doubt a little of his own infallibility, and, to make manifest our unanimity, put his name to this instrument."

• • • • •

THE THREE PRINCIPAL compromises effected at the convention of 1787 were:

1. The Connecticut Compromise, between (a) the large States which wanted representation in the National Legislature by population and (b) the small States which wanted equal representation for all States. Under the compromise two co-ordinate houses were established, with bases of representation fixed in accordance with the interest of the two factions.

2. The Three-Fifths Compromise, which adjusted the quarrel between North and South over taxation and representation of slaves. The North wanted slaves counted for the apportionment of direct taxes but not for representation. The South took the opposite side of each question. It was finally agreed that three-fifths of the slaves should be counted both for taxation and for representation.

3. The Commerce Clause Compromise gave the National Government control over interstate and foreign commerce, as desired by the North, but prohibited any attempt before 1808 to close the ports of the United States to the importation of slaves.

• • • • •

SLAVERY AND its related issues were later the subject of three notable compromises which staved off secession and the War Between the States for more than a generation. All three were negotiated by the "Great Compromiser," Henry Clay.

1. The Missouri Compromise of 1820 provided for admission of Missouri as a slave State, but prohibited slavery in the remainder of the Louisiana Purchase north of 36 degrees, 30 minutes north latitude.

2. The Compromise of 1833 followed South Carolina's adoption of an Ordinance of Nullification which denounced the tariffs of 1828 and 1832 as having been adopted in violation of the Constitution, declared them null and void and without force in the State of South Carolina; warned that an attempt at coercion would result in secession by South Carolina. The compromise provided for a reduction of tariff rates to the level of 1816—to be effected gradually over a period of ten years—and for the use of armed force, if necessary, for preservation of the Union.

3. The Compromise of 1850 contained seven separate provisions, each designed to conciliate either the North or the South. California was admitted as a free State; the question of slavery was left to the settlers (squatter sovereignty) in the remainder of the territory acquired through the Mexican War; more effective provision was made for the return of fugitive slaves.

• • • • •

THIS WAS THE LAST compromise between North and South. A proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit the interference by Congress with the institution of slavery in the States was approved by the House and Senate in 1861 in a final effort to ward off the impending conflict, but the amendment was ratified by only two States.

The most notable failure of the compromise method in the recent history of the United States occurred during the prolonged fight over the Treaty of Versailles. The compromise offered in the form of the Lodge reservations was rejected by President Wilson in the autumn of 1919 and the resolution of ratification embodying these reservations was defeated in November when Wilson's supporters joined irreconcilable opponents of the treaty in voting against it. By the spring of 1920 many of Wilson's supporters were ready to accept the reservations, but the President still regarded them as a "sweeping nullification of the terms of the treaty." On the final roll call, taken on March 19, 1920, the treaty again fell short of ratification with the Lodge reservation—by a margin of seven votes.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Thoughts of a President Fishing.

"Monday—Heigh-ho! Here I am fishing again. Why? There must be a reason why Presidents fish. I must ask Frankfurter. He'd know. They say they're biting. I hope not. There! I had a nibble. Why doesn't it take the bait? I've got it! No! It's just nibbling. It's one of those cautious, timid types. It wants to be sure before it goes ahead. How ridiculous!

• • • •

"Now it's gone away, I guess . . . Probably messed the bait all up, took all it could get without getting caught and then ran off . . . A Tory fish, that's what! . . . What's that? . . . Don't reel in! . . . It will come back? . . . Nonsense! . . . It's joined the Liberty League by this time . . . I know the type.

• • • •

"They tell me tarpon are good fun . . . They crack down on a bait hard, put up a terrific fight, run all over the place, turn somersaults and everything . . . They must have the real Democratic instincts . . . What would I do with a tarpon if I caught one? . . . That question arises in every phase of life, I suppose . . . I used to wonder what I'd do with the presidency if I landed it . . . In fact, I'm still wondering.

• • • •

"There's another one of those darned nibbles . . . Still I guess I shouldn't be so annoyed by nibbles . . . Everything starts with a nibble . . . Look at the years I just fooled around with the idea of a public career until I suddenly made up my mind and took hook, line and sinker! . . . Gosh, I yanked the rod right out of Hoover's hand . . . Or was it Smith's?

• • • •

"Wonder what's going on back in Washington? . . . It's not my luck here that's worrying me . . . It's my luck back THERE!

• • • •

"There! . . . My hook's skinned again! . . . That's the tenth time in the last two hours . . . There ought to be a law to stop things like that . . . But what chance would it have against men like Van Devanter and McReynolds . . . I suppose Roberts might favor it . . . What's come over Roberts, anyhow?

• • • •

"The skipper says he thinks a little fish took that last bait, but I know better . . . It's always the big ones . . . The little fish never get anything . . . I'll bet two-thirds of all the fish in the seas are undernourished . . . But they won't be if they keep stealing my bait.

• • • •

"What? . . . Who? . . . Something took my rod overboard? . . . Phew! . . . Don't let the newspaper men hear about that . . . And radio Farley . . . He'll teach those fish not to do a thing like that!"

What does a sit-down striker do when his doctor tells him to relax?

Frank Hawks, who cracked up after a flight from New York to Miami and back in something like eight hours, says he is through with airplane speed attempts. "I'm over 40 now and it's time to quit racing," he says. Wanna bet?

Chief Justice Hughes' Address

Appeals To Sentiment Of Nation To Back Up Court.

Excerpts of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes' address before the fifteenth annual session of the American Institute of Law yesterday was as follows:

For the eighth time it is my privilege to greet you at this annual rendezvous of the members of the bar and bench. Last year we paid our tribute to George Wickersham, whose outstanding service as the president of the American Law Institute was the crown of his professional career. Today, we recall the leadership of Elihu Root, to whose vision, creative force and directing skill, we largely owe the establishment of this great enterprise of restating the law and removing in a substantial degree the uncertainty and complexity which vex its administration.

Elihu Root will be remembered as one of America's most eminent statesmen. His service as Secretary of War and Secretary of State will always be conspicuous in an imperishable record. But he was pre-eminently a great lawyer and his distinctive public service was made possible because he was a great lawyer. He was great not only because he had a rarely acute mind and had mastered the technique of his profession, but because he was wise. He brought wisdom not only to the service of his clients but to the carrying out of the highest conception of public duty in relation to the opportunities of the bar in improving the administration of justice.

His intellectuality was so marked that only those who knew him well fully appreciated his passionate zeal for betterment. When I was charged with responsibilities in the government of the State of New York he warmed my heart and gave me fresh courage by his effective support in time of need. He constantly sought to improve the institutions of justice, local, national and international. How many important endeavors had the impetus of his proposals and his guiding hand in carrying them out!

Led in Conventions.

He led in the constitutional conventions in New York of 1894 and 1915. He promoted the organization of the Conference of Bar Association Delegates, which was the nucleus of a co-ordinated bar of the United States. His sagacity pointed the way to the solution of the difficulties which beset the organization of the Permanent Court of International Justice. No idle fancies dominated his thought or made his efforts vain. Whenever he appeared there were vision, practicable proposals and skillful execution.

When the American Law Institute was organized, he clarified the need, he showed the necessary method, he procured the financial aid which made the enterprise possible. He had no illusion as to the difficulties. In his initial address he said: "Perhaps we can help." The "making of a permanent organization to accomplish the restatement of the law, with the earnest and real interest in the subject on the part of real men, will help; and as time goes on, the organization which you have made may accomplish such relations with other organizations and such additional duties, and avail itself of such opportunities, as to aid all along the line in the reform of law and the reform of procedure." A prophecy, which I hope will be fulfilled as you approach the completion of your first great task. And he added: "We may not succeed; but we can try. Here is one thing we can try. It is something the need of which is universally recognized. It is something the responsibility for which rests especially upon us. It points the pathway where we will be acknowledged the natural leaders of the democracy in its struggles toward better life, toward permanency of institutions."

Elihu Root's method was thus to marshal the forces of intelligence in order to meet a specific need in a sensible fashion. And through the use of this method, he had faith—an abiding faith—that the competency of mankind to govern itself through democratic institutions could be vindicated. Your notable achievements have been due to that method and have been inspired by that faith—a laborious method indeed, but what labor is too great if it may serve to buttress in any degree the institutions of an ordered liberty? We erect no monuments to mere shrewdness.

Court Up With Work.

It has been my custom on these occasions to refer briefly to the work of the Supreme Court. For several years I have been able to report at these meetings that the court is fully up with its work. I am happy to say that this is true of the current term. We are concluding the hearing of arguments, and once more we have heard all the cases that are ready to be heard. This week cases have been argued which were filed as late as April 20. There are no inordinate or unjustified delays in the Supreme Court.

The figures for the current term do not vary greatly from those of the terms of recent years, and I shall not trouble you with many of them. The total number of cases on our dockets for the current term is somewhat less than the number for last term. As of May 1, there were 946 cases on our appellate docket this term, as against 986 last term, or 40 less. This term there have been argued and submitted on the merits 182 cases, including as one case those argued and submitted in a single group, or 218 cases in individual numbers. This number embraces cases on appeal and cases in which certiorari had been granted. Last term there were argued and submitted 169 cases, or 214 in individual numbers.

We have thus far during the current term granted 123 petitions for certiorari and denied 583. The number granted is close to the usual percentage of petitions which have been found entitled to a grant under our rules. These rules, as I said in my talk to you three years ago, are designed to carry out the intent of the jurisdictional act of 1925 in insuring the hearing of cases that are important in the interest of the law. That is, where review by the court of last resort is needed to secure harmony of decision in the lower courts of appeal and the appropriate settlement of questions of general importance so that the system of Federal justice may be appropriately administered. As I have frequently stated, we are liberal in the application of our rules and certiorari is always granted if four justices think it should be, and, not infrequently, when three, or even two, justices strongly urge the grant.

Since the establishment of the Circuit Courts of Appeals in 1891 there have been four outstanding measures for improving the procedure in the Federal courts. One was the new Equity Rules, promulgated by the Supreme Court in 1912, to simplify equity pleading and practice. A second measure was the jurisdictional act of 1925, to which I have referred, relating to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. That accomplished two results of the greatest importance. One, by enlarging the classes of cases in which jurisdiction should be entertained only upon the grant of certiorari, made it possible for the Supreme Court to devote itself to those cases which demand consideration because of the public importance of the questions involved.

Limitation Is Necessary.

Without such a limitation, no court of last resort could possibly perform its essential function in this great country with its vast amount of litigation affecting merely private interests. This limitation upon jurisdiction has worked well and the rules of the Supreme Court, and their administration, have been directed to the carrying out of the intent of the statute and have given to the limitation its just effect. The other result has been that, through the operation of this jurisdictional statute, the Supreme Court has been able to act as a unit in dealing with all the cases before it.

In this unique court of last resort, with its special function, that sort of action is believed to be highly desirable. It has the sanction of long usage. Every member of the court feels his personal responsibility and meets it in each case, save in the rare instances where a particular justice may be disqualified. Even if a justice is unavoidably absent so that he has not heard oral argument, he still has the opportunity to study the briefs and may take part in the conference. In this way continuity of consideration and concentration of responsibility are maintained.

It should be remembered that, as a necessary consequence of the principles of selection under the jurisdictional act, the cases we hear are important cases. There are, of course, degrees of importance but the cases come to us because of their important character. The attention of the general public is naturally engrossed in decisions of great constitutional questions. There are those who think that particular cases are especially important because they relate to subjects in which they happen to be especially interested. Many, even lawyers, are too near-sighted to observe the important implications in many decisions which attract no general attention.

Third Notable Advance.

The third notable advance in Federal procedure was made in the promulgation by the Supreme Court, under authority of the Congress, of the criminal appeals rules in 1934. By these rules it was sought to simplify appellate practice and to put an end to inordinate delays in the disposition of appeals from the District courts in criminal cases. These rules are few and simple and it is believed that they will expedite appeals without sacrificing any just interest.

The fourth measure for procedural improvement was the recent enactment by the Congress of the statute giving the Supreme Court authority to formulate rules of civil procedure for the District courts of the United States and the courts of the District of Columbia. The court decided to undertake the preparation of a unified system of general rules for cases in equity and actions at law so as to secure one form of civil action and procedure for both classes of cases while maintaining inviolate the right of trial by jury in accordance with the seventh amendment of the Constitution of the United States and without altering substantive rights.

Thus another great work which has called for the expert ability and a wide co-operation of the bar and bench is approaching completion. I take this opportunity to express the grateful appreciation of the members of the court of the earnest work of those who have been devoting their time to this endeavor to provide an improved system of procedure for the Federal courts.

Ochs' Widow Dies at Home Of Heart Attack

Wife of Times Publisher Succumbs on Eve of 77th Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—Mrs. Effie Wise Ochs, the widow of Adolph S. Ochs, late publisher of the New York Times, died today at her suburban home, Hillandale, White Plains, N. Y., of a heart attack. She would have been 77 tomorrow.

A native of Cincinnati, Mrs. Ochs had been married 52 years when her husband died April 8, 1935.

Mrs. Ochs was the daughter of Rabbi Isaac M. and Therese Bloch Wise and spent much of her girlhood on their estate near Cincinnati. Her first school, the Hebrew Union College, was organized by her father, a prominent rabbi and founder of Reform Judaism in America. Later she attended Miss Harriet Wilson's School, Ohio Female College and Notre Dame Academy.

She met Mr. Ochs in 1881 and they were married in 1883 by her father in his Cincinnati temple. She was 23 and her husband, 25.

She wrote dramatic criticisms and book reviews for his newspaper in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Their daughter, Iphigene Bertha Ochs, was born September 19, 1892, when Mrs. Ochs was visiting her parents in Cincinnati. The daughter is married to Arthur Hays Sulzberger, present publisher of the New York Times.

Welfare Charges Refuted by Street

Charges made by Representative Wood that more than 40 per cent of the Board of Public Welfare's funds are spent for administration were refuted further yesterday by Elwood Street, board director.

Releasing the board's statement for the period July 1, 1936, to March 31, 1937, Street declared the board's administrative expense has been only 15.2 per cent. The board's total expenditures for the period were $1,809,363.61, of which $274,673 was for administration.

Cardenas Called Truly Popular By Visiting Mexican Legislator

President Wiping Out Illiteracy, Says Senor Munoz; Arid Lands Reclaimed, Peasants Get Property; Denies Communism.

President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico was described as the most popular chief executive that nation has ever had by Gilberto Flores Munoz, member of the National Congress of Mexico and a prominent figure in the National Revolutionary Party, the leading political organization of that land.

Senor Munoz, who is in this country on a speaking tour, spoke enthusiastically of the great strides being made in Mexico at the present time in improving the conditions of the people.

As a result of the efforts of President Cardenas, he said, illiteracy is rapidly being wiped out. Since September, 1934, no fewer than 6,187 rural schools have been built. In addition there have been founded three rural normal schools, 21 central agricultural schools and 61 regional rural schools. These institutions reach out not only to children and adolescents but to adults as well and help them develop and intensify local agricultural production. Indeed, says Senor Munoz, the schools in the country districts of Mexico have become the centers of community life, giving the peasants an acquaintance with sanitation and health practices, modern agricultural methods and machinery.

President Cardenas' interest in rural education, Senor Munoz added, is but one manifestation of his determination to improve the condition of the Mexican peasant. Of a piece with it are his irrigation, land distribution, rural credits and highway construction policies.

During the last two years the government has carried on an intensive campaign to reclaim arid lands by irrigation and is at present spending 30,000,000 pesos in irrigation works. These efforts have not only benefited small landholders but have also made it possible to place thousands of agricultural laborers on the soil. While the title to that land is vested in these individuals they are not permitted to sell it or give it away, although they can bequeath it to their children. How extensive these irrigation projects are is to be seen in the fact that the Palmito Dam in the state of Durango will have a capacity of over 3,000,000,000 cubic meters and will irrigate around 450,000 acres.

At the same time other land is being made available to the peasants through the breaking up of large landed estates. This process, Senor Munoz declares, is not confiscatory. The landowners are being indemnified on the basis of the assessed value of their holdings. Up to December 31 of last year, more than 1,370,000 families were benefited by this land redivision.

Since the mere possession of land is not enough, the Cardenas government has seen to it that the peasants placed on the land are provided with credit to permit them to buy seed, tools, housing supplies, etc. A Homestead Credit Bank has been established with a capital of 150,000,000 pesos and up to the present about 80,000,000 pesos have been loaned to the peasants to give them a start. The government has also interested itself in the co-operative movement both with respect to production and consumption. One interesting experiment in this connection is the revival of sugar production in the state of Morales. At Zacatepec in that state an old abandoned sugar central has been rehabilitated and is now being operated by the workingmen.

While these and other measures taken by the Cardenas government as well as its friendliness to the Madrid government and the asylum it has given Leon Trotzky has led some to charge Mexico with fostering communism, Senor Munoz denied that this charge was in any sense true. The Communist movement in Mexico is negligible; there is not a single labor organization which is truly of a Communist character, although some of its members may be sympathetic to the Russian experiment. And so far as Spain is concerned, Mr. Munoz said, the Mexican position has from the first been that the Madrid government, as the duly constituted regime, deserves the support of friendly governments.

He suggested his name might have been confused with that of a nephew, Nelson Morris, who had been in Europe.

Children Eager To Have School Strike Continue

Mothers Determined to Force Bus Service to Glen Echo.

"I wanta stay out!"

"Me, too."

"I'll stay out forever!"

This was the weighted opinion of Glen Echo schoolchildren on strike yesterday as they paused in a ball game long enough to answer their mothers' questions on whether they wished to return to classes.

The strike was the mothers' idea in the first place, so the youngsters risked no reprimand. About 104 parents have signed a petition demanding doorstep bus service to their sheltered and prosperous little suburb, located a half mile off the main highway, Conduit road.

The strike has been "raging" for four days, starting last Monday, when Jacqueline Roberts suffered a broken leg, incurred when she was hit as she waited for the bus at Sycamore Store, on the highway.

"I've been fighting for school-bus service two years," exclaimed Mrs. John W. Walther, mother of two and leader of the children's stay-out strike. "When Jacqueline got a broken leg because there was no bus, several of us mothers informed the school we would no longer endanger our children's lives by sending them onto the highway to wait for the bus."

Principal T. A. Nelson of the Glen Echo-Cabin John School explained that he had done nothing to bring about the return of the youngsters to their books, as "bus routes are the province of Preston L. Snyder, custodian of school property of Montgomery County."

Snyder said only "I am familiar with the route, as I used to drive a hay and corn wagon around here." Snyder would not say if he had received any protests from the mothers, or whether he would recommend a change in the route to embrace a 1-mile loop into Glen Echo Heights, where the ball-playing strikers reside.

Meanwhile, the children were enjoying a holiday such as all youngsters pray for this time of year. Under warm May sunlight they shot bows and arrows, fished, flew kites, played jacks, chased their dogs and continued a four-day ball game.

"We haven't heard a thing from the school board," said Mrs. A. L. Morris, mother of four strikers. "The principal refuses to do anything."

Mrs. Richard Ware, mother of one, said: "It's been terrible. We all decided at the same time to take our children out, just as soon as Jacqueline was hurt, and the other three hit. Jacqueline was the only one seriously hurt, but we've been trying all winter—other mothers have been trying for years—to get the bus to come into Glen Echo Heights instead of having the children congregating on the highway, where there are so many trucks and autos." Four other children were struck last year, she stated.

"There are 12 to 15 trucks," added Mrs. P. G. Morris, mother of one, "which pull in there where the children wait every morning. Sooner or later they were bound to hit some of the children with so many around. We knew the school board would do nothing until something serious happened. Now we're doing something."

Principal Nelson declared he had received no protest from the mothers "except one of them called me up and said she was keeping her children out. I have no idea how many were out, but our attendance is about the same today as it normally is on rainy days."

Told that 53 of his young charges were at the moment playing ball nearby, the principal frowned and remarked "that's quite a few." He would not make any recommendations about rerouting the bus a mile, he said, because "that isn't my duty."

Jacqueline Roberts was still in Georgetown Hospial last night, suffering from a triple fractured leg. The others sustained only minor injuries, the principal explained, and "were out playing that afternoon again." There was some disagreement on the accident. Police records show a truck ran over Jacqueline and hit the three others.

Troopers, Garage Plot Is Disclosed

Ellicottt, City Md., May 6 (AP).—Edward A. Schurmer, Baltimore, former employe of John Herbert, Savage, Md., garage owner, today took the witness stand in circuit court to testify in the trial of two suspended State policemen and a former State officer on conspiracy charges.

Shurmer said he was employed at Herbert's garage from the fall of 1935 to the winter of 1936 on a night shift and testified that he saw slips in the garage office marked "Markley, $2, muffler" or "Wheeler, bulb 5 cents." (Albert Markley and John E. Wheeler are the former State policemen on trial.)

Schurmer said there was a double scale of prices at the garage, the higher prices being for patrons who had been sent in by the policemen. He said police cars passing the garage would sound their sirens and a towing truck from the garage would hurry out after them.

Ramspeck Bill Amendment Menaces U. S. Jobs of 10,000 in D. C. Area

Residents Here Are Alarmed By Quota Bill

6,000 Would Be Cut Off by Apportionment in Capital.

By James D. Secrest.

Ten thousand residents of Washington, Maryland and Virginia are threatened with the loss of their New Deal jobs under amendments to the Ramspeck bill approved tentatively yesterday by the House Civil Service Committee.

From 70 to 75 per cent of the 300,000 Government workers now outside the merit system, 40,000 of whom are in the District, also are in danger of being crowded out of the Federal service through competitive examinations.

These estimates were given by Chairman Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, after the committee had tacked on several far-reaching amendments to his bill extending the classified sivil service to all Government workers.

The action was not final, however, and another meeting of the committee will be held next week before the measure is reported to the House.

The threat against employes who are legal residents of this area lies in an amendment providing that the apportionment law, which fixes quotas of Federal jobs for each State in accordance with population, be applied to all Government jobs in Washington.

Only the District government and the Washington postoffice are exempt.

Provisions Explained.

Here's what would happen to New Deal employes from the District, Maryland and Virginia if the Ramspeck bill as amended by the House Civil Service Committee becomes a law:

All jobs would be apportioned among the States and the District in proportion to population. As a consequence, only a small percentage of residents from this area, who now predominate, would have a chance to remain.

After competitive examinations weeded out the less competent, appointments would be made on the basis of the number of jobs available as compared with the population of the States and the District.

Presumably, the incumbents making the highest grades in the tests would be given preference when the weeding-out process under the apportionment provision began.

Taken by surprise, spokesmen for the Government employe organizations withheld comment temporarily. One suggested unofficially the committee might be merely "sending up a trial balloon."

As Washington, Maryland and Virginia are well over their job quotas, a strict enforcement of the apportionment law would eliminate about 6,000 Washingtonians, 1,800 Marylanders and 1,800 Virginians from even a chance at competitive examinations for civil service ratings.

The bill as tentatively approved fixes a time limit of two years for the holding of competitive examinations for noncivil service positions. All jobs for which tests have not been held at the end of that period will be blanketed into the merit system.

Ramspeck, though an ardent defender of the competitive examination throughout hearings on the bill, tried yesterday to have the measure changed to provide for noncompetitive tests.

He explained he had become convinced a bill with the competitive provision would never pass Congress, for three reasons:

The President and the Brownlow Commission recommended noncompetitive tests.

The cost of holding the examinations has been estimated at from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Charles B. Mitchell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, estimates it would eliminate from 70 to 75 per cent of all unclassified employes.

The committee vote was "very close," Ramspeck said, and another ballot probably will be taken next week before the measure is reported. Federal agencies in the civil service in Washington that are now exempt from provisions of the apportionment law include the Government Printing Office, Navy Yard, Walter Reed, St. Elizabeth and Freedman's Hospitals, and the office of the chief of staff of the Army.

No agencies outside the classified service are now controlled by the apportionment act.

Ramspeck said there are approximately 40,000 Federal jobs governed by the apportionment law now and that the amendment to his bill would double that number.

The shakeup would not become effective immediately in agencies such as the Government Printing Office and the Navy Yard, where employes have civil service protection, Ramspeck said, but it would come into play whenever vacancies occur.

Gradually, through retirements and casualties, residents of the District, Maryland and Virginia, who predominate, would be weeded out until they were on a par with the other States.

The upheaval among unclassified Government workers would be more abrupt because of the necessity of holding examinations. Workers who have no claims to legal residences elsewhere would be disqualified even from the examinations.

The committee adopted another amendment designed to bar Washingtonians from jobs in the Federal field service and to confine them to the Congressional districts.

The amendment, which provides jobs in the field services may be filled only by legal or voting residents of the area in which the agency is located, is aimed at "driving out the carpetbaggers," Ramspeck said.

A partial safeguard against too great a turnover in the Federal service was provided by the committee in another amendment which would give credit for experience in any competitive examination.

Incumbents would be credited with two points for each year's experience, up to a maximum of 20 points, Ramspeck said, but they would have to make a passing grade of 70 in the test to obtain the advantage.

The bill follows the Brownlow Commission recommendation in making provision for exemptions from the civil service extension by executive order whenever the positions are of a policy-forming character.

Gold Discovery In Alaska Starts New Stampede

Roaring Tent City Springs Up at Scene of Strike; 50 Planes Land.

By the Associated Press.

Bethel, Alaska, May 6.—The Goodnews Bay gold strike developed into an oldtime Alaskan stampede today with arrival of the first boat of the season.

Between 200 and 300 prospectors flocked over the sands of Kuskikwim Bay, in southwestern Alaska, where recent gold, platinum and palladium strikes were reported.

In three days 50 airplane flights were made bringing prospectors from Anchorage. A roaring "tent here yesterday by Hyndman High.

Prices were as "sky high" as in the hey day of the Klondike when prospectors paid a double eagle ($20) for a place in line at the postoffice.

Platinum strikes have been made on a narrow strip of beach at Goodnews. Gold in small quantities was found on the shores of the Eek River and Togiak Bay. Several mining companies have operated extensively in the Goodnews area for years.

First serious trouble at the new mining camp came when C. B. Worthington, a miner, was stabbed during a gambling game. A United States marshal was sent to investigate the stabbing. The man was brought to the hospital here by airplane.

7 C.I.O. Leaders Get Six-Month Jail Sentences

New England Secretary, 6 Others Convicted of Contempt in Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Lewiston, Me., May 6.—Powers Hapgood, New England secretary for the Committee for Industrial Organization, and six other union leaders were convicted today by a supreme court jury of charges of contempt in violating a temporary injunction against the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike.

All were sentenced to serve six months in the county jail with the exception of John D. Nolan, of Boston, who was absent by consent of the court to go to Elmira, N. Y., because of his mother's death.

Defense Counsel Joseph Kovner said he would seek release of the men through habeas corpus proceedings. They were given into the custody of the sheriff's department and taken to the sheriff's office pending commitment.

The jury, composed of ten men and two women, deliberated for 2 hours and 25 minutes.

Justice Harry Manser immediately discharged the jurors. The trial had been in progress since Tuesday.

Convicted with Hapgood were William J. Mackesy, Peabody, Mass.; Martin J. Lawless, Lynn, Mass.; Paul Salvaggio, Boston; Ernest Henry, Lynn, and Nolan, all C. I. O. organizers, and Sidney Grant, Boston, C. I. O. lawyer.

Counsel for shoe manufacturers, plaintiffs in the civil action, asserted in closing arguments the issue was "whether the C. I. O. was stronger than the courts." Defense counsel had contended the court order against the strike violated freedom of speech.

The jury received the case at 2:50 p. m. (Eastern daylight time) after Judge Manser had told the jury in his charge they should confine themselves to "a single question—did one or all disobey the decree of the court as an institution?"

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP).—A crowd of hosiery workers and others estimated by police at several thousand broke through a group of 100 policemen today to take possession of the Apex Hosiery Co. mill. The mill had closed shortly before.

Seventeen persons were injured in the rush as the police tried to stop the crowd. Windows were shattered and the front door ripped away as the crowd poured into the plant for what William Leader, president of the local American Federation of Hosiery Workers' unit, called the beginning of a sit-down strike. Three persons were arrested.

Washington Women Christen Two New Navy Destroyers

Two Navy destroyers, the U. S. S. Patterson and Jarvis, were christened yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Patterson, of 2339 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Mrs. Thomas C. Craven, a former resident here, the Navy Department announced. The christenings and launchings took place at the Puget Sound Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash.

Miss Patterson christened the U. S. S. Patterson in honor of her grandfather, Commodore Daniel Todd Patterson, who commanded the naval forces at the battle of New Orleans in 1813, and who is buried in the Congressional Cemetery here.

Mrs. Craven, the wife of Rear Admiral Craven, United States Navy, commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District and the Puget Sound Navy Yard, lived here while her husband was on duty at the Navy Department. She christened the U. S. S. Jarvis in honor of Midshipman James C. Jarvis, who was killed during the engagement between the frigate Constellation and the Vengeance in 1800.

Duke's Romance Noted In Mother's Day Speech

By the Associated Press.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, referred yesterday to the Duke of Windsor-Mrs. Simpson romance as evidence that "the power of women has not diminished."

Addressing the Senate on Mother's Day, Thomas remarked that "we have witnessed a mighty king toppled from his throne for a woman."

$500,000 Fire Destroys Catholic Church, School

Mrs. Sleighter Also Hit Girl, Jury Hears

Chambersburg, Pa., May 6 (AP).—A State policeman testified today that Mrs. Elva Sleighter charged with murder, admitted to him she struck 6-year-old Jean Seville "two or three times" with her hand.

Corporal Albert Davis, called to the witness stand at the opening of the third day of Mrs. Sleighter's trial also said the woman told him her husband struck the child with a strap "one hundred or more times" the night of January 10.

The child, a Children's Aid Society ward in the Sleighter home, died that night. Her body was found in Bedford County two weeks later.

Glenn Sleighter, husband of the defendant, was convicted of first degree murder early in the week. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Copies of Century's Rarest Stamp Found

New York, May 6 (AP).—The finding by a young New York woman of two unused copies of the rarest regularly issued twentieth century United States postage stamp led today to the disclosure that four or five of them have been discovered in recent months.

The stamp is given a tentative valuation of $2,500 in Scott's U. S. Catalog. The rarity is similar to the ordinary 1-cent stamp used on current mail. It is slightly wider than the regular 1-cent Franklin stamp and the perforations are of different size.

Senora La Guardia Funeral Is Held

Funeral services were held Wednesday in St. Matthew's Catholic Church for Senora Dona Dora L. de la Guardia, 28, wife of the secretary of the Panama Legation. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Senora la Guardia died at the legation Tuesday after an emergency operation, which Dr. Don Augusto Boyd, Panama Minister, performed. It was believed to have been the first time a Minister or an Ambassador from a foreign natoin practiced surgery here.

Only six months ago Senora la Guardia came to Washington with her husband, Senor Don Camilio de la Guardia, jr., who formerly was aide de camp to the President of Panama and secretary of the New York consulate.

Bed Balancer, Dancers Head Shoreham Bill

Ted Black to Bring Band to D. C. for Week-End Appearances.

By Chanticleer

Maybe you're a sophisticated old soul who thinks no fun can be had in balancing a bed. Yes, just a plain, ordinary thing you tumble into at night. Jimmy Evans dishes out the laughs, though, this week at the Shoreham—with lots of amusing, clever side-angles and a trick, surprise finale.

Jeanette Hackett is on hand, too, the former dance partner of Cesar Romero, and the featured dancer of a number of recent Broadway shows. She's danced on the Shoreham floor before and rates high in popularity with Shoreham patrons. The Wilberts entertain, too, with dance numbers—a young man who strangely resembles Buddy Rogers, and a young lady, very fragile and pretty in her pastel chiffon gowns.

Ted Black, whose band is heard frequently on the radio networks, brings his aggregation to Washington this week-end to play three evenings (Friday, Saturday and Sunday) on the regular moonlight cruises of the Steamer Potomac. The Friday trip begins the season of moonlight cruises—taking off at 8:45 p. m. from Seventh and Water streets. Rain or shine, don't forget. Comfortable deck chairs for non-dancers; cabins glass walled and heated against the elements.

• • • •

You may be as Nordic as Lief Erickson, but you'll go Latin under the influence of Ray Benson's torbas in the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. You don't need to understand the lyrics sung by one of Ray's boys. They're all about dashing senoritas, anyway . . . Another of Boulevard Farm's amateur nights tonight and what with the food being excellent its not a bad idea, what? Dick Richards is your host.

• • • •

Utah Insists Cult Tell What Happened to Body

Salt Lake City, May 6 (AP).—The State suddenly demanded an explanation today of the disappearance of the body of Mrs. Edith Peshak, member of Utah's strange Home of Truth cult, who died in February, 1935.

Health department officials, who finally obtained a signed death certificate Tuesday, demanded that Mrs. Marie H. Ogden, former New Jersey society leader, tell white disposition was made of the corpse. Mrs. Ogden, cult leader, kept Mrs. Peshak's body for months, declaring she would return to life. It disappeared in August, 1935, amid reports that it had been cremated, buried and hidden.

The Budget Question

Many members of Congress are asking themselves: "How can we balance the budget and reduce the national debt?"

The American Institute of Public Opinion has asked voters from coast to coast: "Is it necessary at this time to balance the budget and start erducing the national debt? How should this be done? How much should a man earning $3,000 a year pay in income taxes? Should States and Federal employes be exempt from income taxes?"

these questions will be reported in "America Speaks," an exclusive national poll, in The Sunday Post.

THOMAS JORDAN.

George Goodacre, Former Employer, Says Convicted Slayer 'Was Good Boy;' Mass Meeting Set for Saturday.

The movement to save Thomas Jordan from the chair gained impetus last night when a group met in the Shoreham Hotel to plan for a mass meeting Saturday night. A place will be selected today.

Jordan, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes in a holdup, April 3, 1931, will be electrocuted May 14 unless he gains reprieve.

George Goodacre, Jordan's former employer, declared last night he thought him innocent. "He was a good boy," he said, "far above the average. I cannot believe he did it."

After five unsuccessful attempts to have Jordan's case retried, Defense Attorney John Holzworth unearthed what he called new evidence in the form of the original police report of the holdup.

The report, dated the night of the holdup and murder, described the bandits as follows:

"No. 1 is 23 to 25 years old, 6 feet tall, wearing a mask and a blue suit. No. 2 is about 6 feet tall, gray eyes, fair hair, no weight given, who held the gun."

According to the identification bureau at the District Jail, Jordan is 5 feet 6 inches tall, has black hair and brown eyes.

$50,000 Is Sought For Mule's Kick

Damages of $50,000 were sought of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition, Inc., yesterday in District Court when Frank F. Sullivan, father of 8-year-old Edgar D. Sullivan, asked that amount because of injuries sustained by the boy.

Sullivan, weight-guesser of the show, said his son was kicked in the head by a clown-mule at the show grounds at Eighteenth street and Benning road northwest Monday. The boy is in a serious condition in Casualty Hospital. The suit, filed by Attorney Weldon P. Monson, was rushed so that service could be obtained on the corporation before it left Washington.

U. S. Ban Asked On Child Labor Goods Traffic

Interstate Shipment Would Be Prohibited; Roosevelt Backing Hinted.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration yesterday apparently moved for a direct Federal ban on interstate shipment of child-labor goods, in a bill introduced by Senator Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky Democrat and Administration stalwart.

The bill was dropped casually into the Senate hopper, following a two-day attack on the child-labor problem by Senators Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado, both Democrats.

The Administration hitherto has carefully concealed its plan on child labor and wages and hours, pending a comprehensive analysis of recent court rulings, and Barkley failed to claim Administration backing.

"Little Doubt" Seen.

But Senator Wheeler, who has ordered Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearings on child labor proposals next Wednesday, thought there was "little doubt" on that score.

"When you already have one bill up, and another bill comes in from a friend of the Administration, you may be sure it is an Administration bill," said the Montanan.

In another quarter it was indicated general wage and hour legislation may follow. An Administration measure is said to have been worked out by Government labor and legal authorities, and is ready for submission to the President on his return from his Southern fishing trip. It may be offered to Congress before the court bill comes to a showdown.

Following the Federal rather than the State route to child labor control, the Barkley bill embodies the principle of the old Keating child labor law which was invalidated by a 5-to-4 decision of the Supreme Court in 1918.

It prohibits interstate shipment of goods produced by factories employing children under 16 years of age, "within 60 days prior to removal of such articles therefrom." In more dangerous enterprises, such as mines, foundaries, sawmills or munitions plants, employment of children under 18 would come under the ban.

The Wheeler-Johnson bill provided both direct and indirect methods of control, with provision for separability if part of the law were invalidated. One section was modeled after the invalidated child labor act. Another followed lines of the Ashurst-Sumners prohibition on prison-made goods shipments. The section prohibited interstate shipment of goods in violation of child labor laws of the States to which consigned.

Labor Department Consultation.

When Wheeler ordered committee hearings on child labor legislation, in what observers construed as a move to force the Administration's hand, Barkley first disclosed he would introduce a bill.

Asked yesterday if it was an Administration measure, Barkley replied:

"I don't know if I would call it that, but it was introduced after considerable consultation with the Labor Department, and particularly with the chief of the Child Labor Bureau."

Barkley said his draft was somewhat simpler than the invalidated child labor act, but similar in principle. He said it had no particular bearing on whether the Administration would have other labor legislation to offer.

On the Air Today

More than 24,500,000 American families have radio sets. Offhand that may not positively fascinate you but after all this department seldom lets loose with a mess of statistics and some one might be interested in the number of radio sets in the Nation.

The Columbia network, which released these recent figures on radio set ownership, goes the full route and advises that receiving sets are being bought daily at the rate of 28 per minute—140 every five minutes. Not that it makes any particular difference but no doubt it's a bit of figuring the statistician couldn't resist. (At least Columbia doesn't say how far they would reach laid end to end.)

The report, prepared under the direction of Dr. Daniel Starch, research expert, advises that 1,631,000 families joined the radio audience in the course of 1936. And the average listening hours per day, early this year, was a little more than five hours; a year ago it was 4.1 hours.

Further, 4,500,000 families have radio sets installed in their automobiles. Or at least that number of sets are in autos. And 4,000,000 families admit to having more than one set in the old homestead.

It seems to make little difference whether you live in an urban or rural community, the percentages of sets owned in cities of 250,000 and those of 2,500 population are about the same. However, 98.6 per cent of homes with incomes of over $5,000 have radio sets; only 85.1 per cent of homes with incomes of $2,500 or less. The smaller the income the more the set is in daily use, though.

Reading the Columbia-Starch report more carefully I am overjoyed to find some "end-to-end" figures. It confirms my faith in statisticians and press agents. Here it is: "Altogether, the United States devotes the astonishing number of 95,500,000 family-hours per day to radio listening—enough, if set end to end to extend back in time to 8,942 B. C."

As you must know by this time, Shep Fields and his orchestra open today at the Earle. At first it looked as though the engagement would be off because Fields plays a radio network period each Sunday night. But Guy Wonders, who books the Earle's entertainers, leaped into the breach and came forth with Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra to substitute for the one day. Hal Kemp and his band, which comes a little later to the Earle, also has a radio date each Friday night—so some such arrangement will be used in his case. Perhaps Dorsey again, perhaps a return one-day stand by Fields. I'll bet a lot of people will be on hand today to see how the Fields aggregation effects those novelties in arrangement.

Thousands Assemble For 2-Day Ceremony

Miss Gretchen Thompson, of New Orleans, to Rule Over Colorful Affair as Shenandoah XIV; 35 Bands to Play.

By Scott Hart.

A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., May 6.—Tall, blonde Gretchen Bigelow Thomson arrived tonight behind a police motorcycle escort and caught her first glimpse of the thousands of people who tomorrow will see her coronation as Queen Shenandoah XIV, the ruler of a fleeting kingdom of fleeting apple blossoms.

She saw a town poised like a gay firecracker to explode tomorrow in her honor. She smiled at what she evidently thought were pleasing prospects. In the car with her were Mrs. B. B. Dutton, chairman of the queen's committee, and Harry F. Byrd, jr., assistant director of the fourteenth Apple Blossom Festival. The party went directly to the residence of Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, the queen's official hostess. A dinner party was given in her honor.

All day long thousands of people poured in as the vanguard of the hosts who tomorrow will see Miss Gretchen Bigelow Thomson, of New Orleans, crowned as Queen Shenandoah XIV in the now nationally famous Apple Blossom Festival. The crowds, which tomorrow will be the subjects of the queen, swarmed the hotel lobbies and cafes, crowded the streets and as night came were overflowing every place of public and private accomodation.

Ahead of them is a crowded schedule of activity as follows: Friday, band concerts, coronation of the queen, a pageant, "When Beauty Came;" an aerial show and fireworks display, a block dance and reception of the princesses by Queen Shenandoah.

Saturday, a repetition of the pageant, a reception and luncheon for the queen and her court, a grand feature parade, "The Trail of the Pink Petals," another aerial show, more fireworks, block dancing and the queen's ball.

Thirty-five Bands to Play.

With all this in the offing, the city is poised like a gay firecracker ready to explode in a burst of color and noise tomorrow. Behind the scenes now are 35 bands and drum and bugle corps from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. Also behind the backdrops are many floats that drip with apple blossoms.

Behind the scenes, right now, are the 32 princesses who comprise the court of the queen and they are putting the last smoothing touches on their Elizabethan costumes. Unseen today are the 1,600 students who will participate in the pageant and the various attendants of the queen and all the other various functionaries of her bright and fleeting kingdom.

In the public view today are hotel keepers who summon all their graciousness in saying "The house is full," and the cafe keepers and the cafe functionaries who flit about with a haste of orders in their heads, and the employes in bus and railroad stations who have a vast human traffic to manage, and the streets that are full of automobiles with tags from the far-places of the country, and the festival officials who dart about under the compelling last-minute rush of things.

But if you choose to go to the top of Winchester's tallest building you can see from the windows a country-side that is a tapestry of white and pink apple blooms woven in palest shades against the dark green of the rolling hills. The trees are near full bloom on some of the richest orchard land in the world. And their color weaves in to the very outskirts of the historic city where a queen from New Orleans will receive tomorrow a crown of apple blooms.

The queen comes from the land of the Mardi Gras, is tall and blonde. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones Thomson and a granddaughter of Mrs. A. Pembroke Thomson, of Hawthorn, Jefferson County, W. Va. They will tiptoe to see her here tomorrow as Capt. J. R. Beardall, aide to Secretary of the Navy Swanson, places the crown on her head. The surrounding scene will be the 70-acre campus of Handley School that is full of cherry and apple blossoms.

Then the queen and the crowds will view the pageant, offered in three parts. This opens with an overture by the Handley Band. While the Doxology is played, a reader will describe the departure of winter and the coming of spring. A dance of dedication will follow.

Then comes the prologue, a prehistoric scene wherein the earth dwellers dressed as primitive men and women will portray the world before the dawn of beauty. They will be at hard labor, burdened with loads or seated before crude and dismal shelters.

In the second part, Ceres, the Mother of Beauty, enters and signals the dawn of brighter times. Ceres speaks, and the dance of darkness becomes a dance of light. Concluding, she gives to the earth dwellers the seeds of beauty. Part one of the pageant is devoted to Beauty in Legend and Story. In pantomine, the Apple of Hesperides, Venus, Minerva and Juno accompanied by the Shepherd Boy, Paris, appear on an esplonade. They wage, in pantomine, a beauty contest. Paris acts as judge and finally awards the prize, a golden apple, to Venus, who leads the ball dance.

Dancing Included.

The theme of part II of the pageant is "Beauty in Song." This will bring dances, including "The Daisy Dance" and "The Apple Tree Dance." Part III will be devoted to "Beauty in Festival." This will bring a cherry blossom dance to the music of a Chinese lullaby and a tulip dance set to music of the "Dutch Patrol." All groups will participate in dancing at the finale. The pageant was written by Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of Handley High School, and is directed by Mrs. Virginia Boyd Barr.

Physicians See Esophagus Act In New Movie

Motion pictures of food passing down the esophagus to the stomach, the heart at work and the lungs contracting and expanding were shown in Washington yesterday for the first time.

The film, explained personally by Dr. William H. Stewart, leading American exponent of cine-fluorography, was a feature of the final sessions of the District Medical Society's annual scientific assembly.

Other highlights of the concluding program included descriptions by two Washington surgeons of a unique brain operation, a discussion of the results of serum treatment in pneumonia and a motion picture on experimental catalepsy.

Ever since the invention of motion pictures medical scientists have sought to combine the cinema with fluoroscopy so that a permanent record might be kept of internal organs in natural activity, Dr. Stewart asserted.

The X-ray picture shows only one "pose." The fluoroscope allows the doctor to view bones and organs in action. But not until five years ago, the New York radiologist explained, was a lens perfected which made "inside movies" possible.

Patient Behind Screen.

The patient merely steps behind a fluoroscopic screen, in front of which stands the camera. The room is darkened and when all is ready the "director" gives the order to "roll 'em over," in Hollywood parlance.

Even as many would-be actors learn that they don't screen well, so are some patients better film fluoroscopy subjects than others, Dr. Stewart declared. The ideal person for his purposes weighs less than 140 pounds, is young and not fleshy, he said.

The apparatus presents myriad technical difficulties, which accounts for the fact that only five men are operating it throughout the world. One is in France, another in England, a third in Germany, a fourth in Japan—and Dr. Stewart, who is director of radiology in New York's famous Lenox Hill Hospital on Park avenue.

Lobotomies Described.

Reporting on the results of 25 prefrontal lobotomies performed by Dr. James W. Watts and himself during the last seven months, Dr. Walter Freeman said one-third effected recoveries, another third accomplished no good and the remainder proved nothing.

The operation, originated in 1936 by Egas Moniz, a Portuguese, and first performed in this country by Drs. Freeman and Watts, members of the George Washington University faculty, consists of boring two holes in the top of the head just above the forehead and destroying some of the nerve cells in the frontal loge of the brain.

Dr. Watts, who handles the knife, described to the assembly the case of a woman who had had 18 abdominal operations and spent two years in bed prior to undergoing a lobotomy here. She apparently was suffering from rheumatic heart disease and arthritis.

Three days after the operation she was walking. That was five months ago. She has not been sick in be da day since. Her symptoms have practically disappeared.

Discussing the other operations, Dr. Freeman reported cases in which "agitated depressions" were made to disappear and startling changes wrought in persons who previously were disturbed by cisitors and even feared to cross the street.

Although two of the patients have since been placed in institutions, two others who previously were confined are now at liberty, he said. Three others are now working regularly.

Medical Society Views 'Chamber of Horrors'

A framed "chamber of horrors" was displayed yesterday at the final session of the District Medical Society's scientific assembly.

Accumulated by Dr. David Davis, local ear, nose and throat specialist, the collection consists of safety pins, peach stones, chicken bones, coins, buttons, false teeth and other knick-knacks he has recovered from the innards of Washingtonians.

Daintily mounted on the "horror board" is a peach stone which the wife of a Washington newspaperman inadvertently swallowed one day last August. Using his esophaguscope, Dr. Davis plucked forth the large pit without harmful results.

There is also the set of false teeth which a woman bolted down in a suicide attempt last February.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

It's wonderful how a man can open the door of his mind and let in thoughts he wants and keep out the ones he don't want. I suppose it is the power of concentration that enables a man to read his newspaper while his wife is talkin' a streak about his neighbor.

A city man can sleep peacefully with the elevated trains roarin' by his open window all night. But if he goes to the country, he can't get any sleep because the crickets keep him awake. I had an uncle one time who was keeper of a lighthouse. This lighthouse had a revolving light and every time the light went around once, a shotgun automatically went off, in case the light couldn't be seen in the fog. After my uncle had worked there 37 years, he was sleeping one night and the shotgun misfired and didn't go off. My uncle sat straight up in bed and says "What was that?"

Allies for McCarran.

The Association of Federal Mechanics writes in to say that Senator Pat McCarran has a new ally in the association—"which will throw all of its strength to his support." The association has a case to state, and does so in its letter which follows:

"The senator from Nevada has called upon organized labor to act in behalf of his bill now in committee for an increase in wages for the low-paid Government employes, and we wish to assure the gentleman from Nevada that he will receive the full support of this association.

"It is in the interest of this association to co-operate to the fullest extent to balance the budget, but we feel that we should not be caused to suffer the effects of double taxation, namely one, in removing a part of the recognized earnings of a tradesman at the pay window, and the other in the form of taxation on all things we consume in our homes.

"Congress has directed that through the national labor relations act, every mechanic and tradesman shall have the right to organize and select representatives to meet in committee and conference with their employers, except the United States Government as an employer.

"The Government recognized the right of its mechanics and tradesmen to sit in committee and confer as to wages and compensation for many years. For example, the Navy Yard order, No. 23, and later the Navy Board in 1891, and further improved by an executive order December 7, 1912, and a further reference to Title 44, Chapter 40, of the United States Code.

"The Congress has granted privileges and rights to every tradesman in the country and to more than 100,000 on the United States pay rolls, and the custodial mechanics and tradesmen represent the last tenth of 1 per cent of all the tradesmen, and we will seek our proper status as such and we shall seek the wages due us as based upon our services and the cost of living.

"The Association of Federal Mechanics represents and includes in membership hundreds of craftsmen and tradesmen in the custodial service of the Federal Government."

The association's officers were listed on the letterhead as: C. K. Murr, president; W. S. Wilson, vice president; R. S. Gates, financial secretary, and J. I. Weeks, treasurer.

South Carolinians in Washington are planning a big time for tomorrow night—their annual "May Time" dance . . . This will be held from 9 to 1 in the gold ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel . . . Among those invited are Secretary and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Assistant Secretary and Mrs. J. Monroe Johnson, Senator and Mrs. E. D. Smith, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Representatives James P. Richards, G. Heyward Mahon, John C. Taylor, Allard H. Gasque, Thomas S. McMillan, Hampton P. Fulmer, Edward P. Hodges, of the adjutant general's office; Charles E. Jackson, of the Bureau of Fisheries, and J. Austin Latimer, of the Postoffice Department . . . Garland E. Taylor, of Spartanburg, is president of the club, and has appointed Jack A. Edens, of the War Department, and Arthur Cornwall, of the House Office Building, as ticket and floor chairmen, respectively.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended May 5 as approximately 6,900,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1936, 6,864,000 tons; 1935, 5,023,000 tons.

New Members of Club.

Two new members, Anthony J Scullen, consulting engineer at Catholic University, and Dr. Casmir Leibell, were taken into the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday. They were presented to President Arthur W. Defenderfer by Attorney Fred J. Rice at the weekly meeting at the Carlton Hotel.

Ickes Assails Abattoir Odor Near Capitol

Slaughter House Would Be Traffic Menace, Report Charges.

Construction and operation of an abattoir in Northeast Washington would create a new traffic nuisance besides produci g foul odors and gases, polluting Popes Run and decreasing property values, according to a report made public late yesterday by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

Culminating a searching study into the plans of Adolf Gobel, Inc., of New York and Chicago, to build a slaughter house and rendering plant in the 3700 block of Benning road, Frederick H. Walton, animal expert in the Office of Indian Affairs, informed Ickes:

That trucks laden with cattle, sheep and hogs bound for the plant would clog the city's main traffic arteries and prove a nuisance to residents and business places along the route.

That autos crossing the Benning viaduct "would have to pass through an odor curtain discharging directly from killing floors, processing tanks and the inedible rendering department where fertilizer is prepared."

That dried blood dust might be deposited on window sills, balconies and doorways at considerable distances.

That pollution of Popes Run would be inevitable, to the detriment of the nearby lily ponds.

Appearance of the report by Walton, who has had many years' experience in the design, building and operation of packing and other industrail plants, coincided with an announcemnet the Senate District sub-committee considering the King bill will conduct hearings at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Consideration Delayed.

Opening of public hearings on the measure to regulate "nuisance industries" in the District originally was scheduled for this afternoon. A postponement was necessary because two of the three members, Senators McCarran and Tydings, could not attend today. The third committeeman is Senator Austin.

Earlier in the day the head of the Interior Department, which has extensive property holdings in the vicinity of the proposed abattoir, made public a letter in which he states his support of the King bill to "prevent the monstrous mistake of allowing a large-sized slaughter house to be operated within sight and certainly within smell of the Capitol."

Addressed to Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic Association, leader of the fight to stop the Gobel firm from carrying out its plans, the letter says:

"I hope that you will be able to impress upon the members of the Senate District Committee the effrontery of this attempt to convert the northeast gateway to the city into a stockyards.

"I am sure that every thoughtful citizen of Washington, every property owner who has any sense of realty values, every businessman and shopkeeper will feel repugnance when all the facts about this outrageous enterprise are known."

Predicts Rapid Decline.

The Walton report predicts "the whole district in the vicin of the slaughter house, packing plant and stockyards would deteriorate in value very rapidly."

"It is indicated," the investigator continues, "that a maximum of 112 cattle, 200 calves or 1,200 sheep and 2,400 hogs can be slaughtered daily in the proposed plant. The exact numbers of livestock transported on railroad cars and delivered by truck cannot be determined, but the processors, no doubt, will complete their requirements for a daily kill by supplementing what may arrive by truck through purchase at the stockyards in Baltimore.

"This would mean the movement in and out of railroad traffic with shunting engines, whistles and bells t' oughout the day and night with the accompaniment of livestock bawling and stench from the filled and empty railroad cars."

Dietz Again Arrested—This Time for Speeding

William Pilsco, 34, alias William Dietz, Washington sportsman, arrested during recent gambling raids, was again in the hands of the law yesterday.

Traffic Policeman A. D. Clarke stopped Dietz on the Highway Bridge for allegedly driving 50 miles an hour. Booked at the Fourth Precinct Station, Dietz posted $25 collateral to appear in Traffic Court this morning.

Girl, 2, Fatally Burned.

Josephine Roberts, 2, colored, was burned to death last night when her home at Division avenue and James street caught fire as her father, Joseph Roberts, was building a fire in the fireplace. Kerosene, which he poured on the flames, exploded, causing the house to catch fire.

Woodring Confirmed.

Yesterday the Senate confirmed the nomination of Harry H. Woodring, of Kansas, to be Secretary of War on a permanent basis. Woodring has been serving as Secretary under a temporary appointment.

Colonial Dames Award Honors, Name Leaders

Mrs. Joseph Rucker LaMar and Mrs. James P. Andrews yesterday were elected honorary presidents of the National Society of Colonial Dames, holding their twenty-third biennial conference at the Shoreham Hotel.

Honorary vice presidents chosen included Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. James P. Andrews.

The society named Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, of its Pennsylvania group, as active president. She succeeds herself for a second term.

Other officers elected included Miss Annie B. Jennings, of Pennsylvania, vice president; Mrs. Clarence G. Anderson, of Georgia, second vice president; Mrs. Edgar M. Morsman, of Nebraska, third vice president; Mrs. William Davis Miller, of Rhode Island, recording secretary; Mrs. Herbert A. Claiborne, of Virginia, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edward C. Moore, of Massachusetts, treasurer; Miss Agnes Peter, of Washington, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Victor B. Woolley, of Delaware, registrar, and Mrs. Egbert Jones, of Mississippi, historian.

Principal speaker at Constitution dinner of the society last night was Gilbert H. Montague, prominent New York lawyer.

Certain similarities between the celebrated Magna Charta, which King John was forced to sign in the meadow of Runnymead, and the bill of rights and the Federal and State constitutions, were pointed out by the speaker.

"During the period of the American Revolution, beginning with the Virginia bill of rights, the phrase of the Magna Charta, 'the law of the land,' was embodied in the constitutional provisions of 8 of the original 13 States," he said.

Wilson Urges New Reverence of Law

A new reverence for the fundamental law of the land and a new appreciation of the great patriots who drew up the Constitution was urged last night by Fred Taylor Wilson, historical writer and lecturer, in an address at the Wardman Park Theater.

Wilson took as his topic "Our Constitution and Its Makers," the title of his latest book.

His address was under the auspices of the T. Arthur Smith Bureau of Washington, and the speaker was introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia.

Maj. Hawley to Receive Award From Red Cross

The first aid and life-saving unit of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross will award a service medal and a certificate of appreciation to Maj. James S. Hawley at the Chapter House, 1730 E street norhwest, at 8 p. m. today. Map. Hawley is being honored for five years' meritorious service with the life-saving division of the Red Cross.

'Possum, Captured In Street, Breaks Jail and Escapes

Two Second Precinct policemen captured a 'possum early yesterday morning—but you'll just have to take their word for it.

Privates G. V. Moore and S. B. Myers say they caught the animal in the first block of R street northwest. They took it to the station to await a claimant.

Having no place to put the animal, they tied it up in the cellar. When they went to get it later it was gone.

Denhardt Freed On $25,000 Bond

New Castle, Ky., May 6 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt was released on $25,000 bail today after a jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked on whether he shot to death his fiancee, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, 40.

Richard Adcock, jury foreman, said the 11 farmers and a filling station operator stood seven to five for acquittal. They began consideration at 5:25, p. m. Tuesday.

The 61-year-old former lieutenant governor and adjutant general of Kentucky hailed the result as "a great vindication," and beamed as he posed for pictures. Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall reset the case for trial at a date to be fixed later.

Sato Indicates Fall of Ministry

Tokyo, May 6 (AP).—Naotake Sato, Japanese foreign minister, told the foreign press today Japan "sympathized" with Germany's demand for the return of lost colonies, but had no territorial ambitions of her own in the South Seas.

Asked if he intended to propose a nonaggression pact with the United States, Sato said cheerfully he feared his political life was too short for such a move, although he favored an agreement of the sort. This led his interviewers to believe the foreign minister felt the fall of his cabinet was not far off.

Wendel Asserted Baby Fell Out of Bed, Died

Newark, N. J., May 6 (U.P.).—Paul H. Wendel's "confessions" to the Lindbergh kidnaping—allegedly obtained from him by torture—were read in Federal court today. They turned out to be tales of how the child died when it fell out of bed.

Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County detective, and Ellis, jr., then began cross-examination of Wendell, a procedure that probably will consume three days. The Parkers are on trial in Federal court on charges of kidnaping Wendel and forcing him to "confess" to the Lindbergh crime in an attempt to avert Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution and win a new trial for the German carpenter.

Air Field Site May Be Chosen On Wednesday

Selection of a site for Washington's long-awaited municipal airport will be made probably next Wednesday, Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, predicted yesterday following an executive meeting of the Washington Airport Commission.

King disclosed the commission had narrowed the field of possible locations to four and that a decision might have been reached but for the absence of Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

It is believed the commission already has options on one or more of the sites under consideration.

Whether Gravelly Point and Washington Airport are still in the running is not known, but opponents of both fields freely predict that if either is recommended legislation again will be blocked as it has been for more than a decade.

Unauthentic reports have been circulated that the commission will propose a dual airport plan, which would provide a fair weather field close to the city and another airport on higher ground for foggy days and nights.

Such a scheme was proposed by the Senate Commerce Committee in its broad report on flying fields some weeks ago.

The decision of the commission will not be disclosed until after a report is made to Congress in accordance with the law under which it was established.

4 Found Guilty in Fake Medical Certificate Mill

St. Louis, May 6 (AP).—A Federal Court jury, which heard the Government describe how "untrained men were turned out to practice medicine on an unsuspecting public," convicted four defendants today of using the mails in a conspiracy to defraud through traffic in faked diplomas and licenses.

The jury deliberated only two hours and 35 minutes, after listening to nine days of testimony, convicting George M. Lindsay, of Kansas City; his stepson, George M. Lindsay, jr.; Date R. Alexander, of Kansas City, and "Prince" Ali Yehia Debeh, who postal inspectors said was a former Holt, Mo., farm boy posing as an Egyptian "arthritis specialist." Sentences were deferred.

Plane Contract Let.

A contract for 15 Navy amphibian airplanes, VJ-class for general utility purposes, was awarded yesterday by the Navy Department to the Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation, of Long Island, for $571,923.

Dunbar Wins Annual Cadet Competition

Captures Prize in Drill of Colored School Brigade.

Company B, Dunbar High School, Capt. Maurice C. Clifford, jr., commanding, won the forty-fifth annual competitive drill of companies of the Ninth Brigade, Colored High School Cadets, at Griffith Stadium yesterday before 15,000 students of Dunbar, Armstrong, Cardozo and Phelps schools.

The winning captain was awarded the teachers' diamond medal by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, National Youth Administration official. Together with the commissioned officers of his command, he also received a gold medal from James H. Wilson, member of the Board of Education, while individual members of the company were awarded blue ribbons of merit.

Cardozo High School was second, Company B, Capt. Carroll Scott commanding, winning the consolation award. Commissioned officers of this company were awarded silver medals, and individual members received red ribbons.

The drill was featured by a brigade review by John H. Wilson on behalf of the Board of Education, a special guard mount and a silent drill of non-commissioned officers of the Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth and Tenth regiments comprising the brigade.

Committee Reports War Profits Bill

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee favorably reported the Sheppard-Hill war profits bill to the Senate yesterday, although a minority of the committee denounced it as a recipe for militarism and dictatorship.

Signed by Senators Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, the minority report asserted the bill would "put profits in war, not out," and would place civilian labor under complete control of the Government "even as it is today in Italy and Germany."

The measure would give the President power to fix prices in war time, control industry for war purposes, and limit profits to 95 per cent of the previous three-year average. It also would authorize drafting of man-power for military service.

U. S. Will Contest Aluminum Order

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department will contest jurisdiction of the Federal District Court at Pittsburgh to stop the Government's anti-trust suit pending in New York against the Aluminum Co. of America.

The Government has been restrained temporarily by an order, signed April 29, by District Judge Robert L. Gibson, of Pittsburgh.

The Federal court clerk at Pittsburgh was notified yesterday that department attorneys would appear today and file a motion to quash the service, set aside the writ, dismiss the petition filed by the Aluminum Co., and vacate the restraining order.

Art Museum Meeting.

Annual meeting of the Association of Art Museum Directors will be held here today and tomorrow with about 30 delegates attending.

'Repeating' Is Hinted in Daylight Vote

20 Letters Apparently Came From Same Source.

Evidence that the ballot boxes are being stuffed in the unofficial poll on daylight saving time for Washington appeared yesterday.

Out of 30-odd letters received yesterday by Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, relating to the Sacks bill, at least 20 were so similar that they seemed to have a common origin.

As a rseult, however, the balloting changed from an overwhelming number of "noes" to a slight majority for the "ayes," according to the committee clerk.

The 20 letters favoring daylight saving time for Washington appeared to have been written on the same typewriter and identical stationery. They were also similar in tone and language, although the signatures were different.

Not taken into account, moreover, were 75 letters received yesterday by Representative Sacks (Democrat), Pennsylvania, all favoring the proposal to move the clocks forward an hour each summer.

Even Sacks, however, was a bit skeptical of their value because they came to him in a single envelope.

Letters received by the committee show a distinct cleavage between the sexes on the issue. The women are almost 100 per cent against a change, whereas the men favor it.

The committee is awaiting a report from the District Commissioners before acting on the bill.

Measure to Limit Taxi Jobs Praised

A bill aimed at preventing Federal and District employes from driving taxicabs was commended yesterday by Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

The bill, now pending before the House, was introduced by Representative Charles Andrews (Democrat), Florida, and has been approved by both the Commissioners and the Budget Bureau. It would fine or imprison violators.

Labor Bureau, Security Board to Co-operate

Co-ordination between the Labor Department and the Social Security Board to solve placement and insurance problems for unemployed persons was described by Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security Board chairman, at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the International Association of Public Employment Services, last night at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"If effective integration is accomplished," he said, "the administration of each function will be rendered more efficient and will be reinforced through administration of the other functions."

Pedestrian's Death Boosts Total to 44

D. C. Man Killed by Car; Fourth Fatality in Three Days.

The District's forty-fourth traffic death and the fourth in three days was recorded last night when Samuel Crown, 35, of 638 D street northwest, was killed as he was crossing Thirteenth street at I street northwest.

Accompanied by Laner Wilcox, 30, of Hartwell, Pa., who was also hit, but only slightly hurt, Crown was struck by a car operated by Ruth M. Kirby, 47, of 1301 Fifteenth street northwest, a public school teacher, police said.

She was held for action of the coroner.

Harold Cairway, 6, of 1120 New Jersey avenue southeast, was injured critically when he was struck by a truck. Physicians at Providence Hospital held little hope for his recovery. They said he suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries.

Driver Not Held.

Fifth Precinct police said the truck was operated by William G. Howard, 47, of 216 Eleventh street southeast. He was not held. The child ran into the street while playing in front of his home.

Louis Brown, colored, 19, of 1477 Florida avenue northwest, died at Casualty Hospital after the automobile he was driving collided with another at Ardmore, Md., on Defense highway.

Two students of St. John's College, Annapolis, who were riding in the other machine, were injured seriously. Treated at Casualty Hospital, they were identified as John Brown, 20, of Queen Anne, Md., and Edwin Heinen, 21, Bay Shore, Long Island. Both boys suffered possible skull fractures.

Others injured in the crash were Henry Letterbaugh, colored, 15, of 1101 Fairmont street northwest; Alexander Smith, colored, 18, of 1101 Euclid street northwest; George Jackson, colored, 21, of 1433 Columbia road northwest, and James Mathews, colored, 16, of 725 Euclid street northwest.

Sixteen Permits Revoked.

Operators' permits of 16 Washingtonians were revoked by the Board of Revocations and Restorations at its last meeting, it was announced yesterday. All had been convicted of traffic offenses. The list follows:

Revoked—Robert R. Smithers, 3723 Q street northwest, reckless driving; Lorman M. Nebeker, 3409 Woodley road northwest, reckless driving; Robert D. Lovelace, 3220 Twelfth street northeast, leaving after colliding; Arthur L. Jones, 2501 Fourteenth street northwest, colliding; William T. Hale, 401 Twenty-third street northwest, reckless driving; Joshua Colston, 202 D street northwest, reckless driving; Edward Alexander, 1930 Irving northwest, reckless driving; Edward W. O. Young, 1002 Park road northwest, speeding, 52 miles; Ralph R. Winslow, Alexandria, Va., speeding, 50 miles; Howard E. Williams, 1623 Minnesota avenue southeast, speeding, 50 miles; Delmas C. Stutler, 4630 Davenport street northwest, speeding, 50 miles; Cossie C. Proctor, 5423 Bell place northeast, speeding, 50 miles; John F. Moran, jr., 2715 Thirteenth street northeast, speeding, 55 miles; Marshall K. Hood, 524 T street northwest, speeding, 55 miles; Daniel J. Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Tonight Will Be Practically a Gala One on F Street With Two 'Premieres' Scheduled by Loew Executives

'A Star Is Born' and 'Woman Chases Man' Both Are to Be Shown to Invited Guests and Public at Palace and Capitol Respectively; Callers Drop In—and Out; They Should Keep Those Dogs Off Screen.

BELL.

TONIGHT will be what is technically known as "gala" along F street. The Loew executives, as has been indicated here before, are doubling up on previous records and celebrating two "Hollywood premieres" at the same time—"A Star Is Born," at the Palace, and "Woman Chases Man," at the Capitol.

This is a bit of an innovation. Never before, to the best of a treacherous memory, has any single organization attempted to accommodate two invited audiences, flash a double set of floodlights and otherwise do the things in duplex fashion that usually characterize an important film opening.

There are necessarily, two sets of invited audiences. It seems to me that one of the major problems confronting Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc.; Mr. Linton Wells, distinguished visitor to the Capital for at least one of these brilliant occasions; Ethel Friedner, and the others involved in the goings-on, must have been to decide who would prefer to see which, if you get the idea.

The two pictures, of course, are not identical, except possibly in the matter of capable cast—Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in one and Janet Gaynor and Fredric March in the other.

Except for the fact that it is a trifle difficult to be in two places at the same time, any drama desk ought to find it interesting to check tonight's reactions.

There will be more of this here tomorrow, I am afraid.

So there comes a cordial note from Harry H. Baker, Washington manager of the Wilson Line of steamers, inclosing credentials that the magician-manager thinks will do some good to these dancing feet. It seems impossible ever to live down that five minutes of inadvertent "truckin'." However, Harry seems to feel that the broad decks of the City of Washington would be a splendid place to display our rivalry to the supremacy of Fred Astaire—if any. It is made fairly plain in Harry's letter that music on the boat this summer will be supplied by a Sidney Orchestra, under the conductorship of Sammy Marks. Being one of the best of the local masters of hocus-pocus, Mr. Baker cannot withstand the temptation of a brief postscript, "It just can't be done—sometimes you try—I mean, pulling a hat out of a rabbit!"

It seems not too soon to remind the theatergoing public again that the Shubert production of the "Ziegfeld Follies" will be seen in a special actors' benefit matinee on Friday, May 14, at the National Theater.

The complete cast of the production will appear at this performance and the scale of prices will be at the usual house levels. Since this is for a charity, there will be no amusement tax imposed.

"The Follies" cast, this year, is headed by Fannie Brice and Bobby Clark, two of the contemporaneous theater's most adept comics.

They are supported, as goes without saying, by a huge ensemble of singers, comedians and dancers, among whom is that deft Australian juggler, Stan Kavanaugh, well known to Washington audiences by reason of his frequent appearances at the Earle and the Capitol—or maybe it was still the Fox when he was there.

"Lost Horizon," Frank Capra's new production for Columbia Pictures, which will be shown shortly in the National Theater as a "road show" offering, will be accorded a preview screening in the auditorium of the National Press Club on Friday night—meaning tonight. Owing to the limited seating capacity of the auditorium and the importance of the picture, admittance will be by card only

Bertha Thiele, who appeared in the leading role of "Maedschen in Uniform," will be seen in the German film, "Die Weisse Majestaet," to be shown by the Foreign Language Cinema League in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, northwest, on Saturday night. Thrilling mountain climbing scenes in the Bavarian Alps are said to add interest to a romantic story.

There is no escape from these United Artists representatives, here to add luster to the previews of the Sam Goldwyn pictures that are to be given "permeers" on F street tonight. One is just getting about his official tasks when who bob in but Ethel Friedner and Flo Silver—both of United Artists—to put "the heat" on this desk. Well, little paragraphs like these are what comes of big events like that!

The proficient acting of the two small dogs in "Shall We Dance," starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, at RKO-Keith's, and "Wings of the Morning," coming along soon to a Warner Brothers screen, have created a vast urge in this susceptible breast to possess another canine.

For 12 years we were the proud owner of an English bull terrier, named Billy, that could do everything but talk. That memory never has died, although the dog, unhappily, did.

I suspect that what I want now is a Boston. I have always wondered what it would be like to own a Great Dane, but when I hear of that six pounds of meat a day business and stop to think that every time he wags his tail he probably will knock over a table or some member of the family, I am not so sure.

Anyhow, I want a dog and am going to have one—heaven help the neighbors!

Plays Lead in New Belasco Film

The interested young woman on the telephone is Betty Stockfield, a newcomer, it is believed, to major roles on the American screen, who appears in one of the principal parts in "Girls Club," the new importation, which opened on the screen of the Belasco Theater last night. The picture is not unlike "Maedschen in Uniform" and is only one of many of foreign manufacture to be shown at the Belasco.

Warners Open House Sixteen On Local Wheel

The Calvert Is Dedicated Before Capacity Crowd at 2324 Wisconsin.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The Calvert Theater, sixteenth unit on the circuit of theaters operated in the National Capital by the Warner Brothers, was officially dedicated last night with a capacity house in attendance.

The new theater, located at 2324 Wisconsin avenue, northwest, has a seating capacity of approximately 1,000, with seats so generously spaced that everyone has ample area in which to be comfortable and no one has to arise to permit seat occupants in the same row to pass.

The house is one of the most attractive on the Warner "wheel," being done in blues, terra cotta and lighter shades that form a complete color harmony. The ceiling lights in the auditorium are of the modernistic type with blended colors to lend both warmth and beauty to the interior of the theater. The sidewall lights are in the form of broken circles that lend a slightly bizarre touch to an otherwise conventional design.

One Floor Plan.

The seats all are on one floor and each commands a perfect view of the screen. The lobby is another example of modernistic design with a barrel light overhead that illuminates the approach to the auditorium proper brilliantly. The poster panels and all appurtenances are of the most modern design and the house, of course, boasts the last word in air-conditioning and ventilation.

There are handsome and commodious rest rooms for both men and women and the stage is of sufficient proportions to permit the presentation of "acts," if that ever became desirable.

Last night's dedicatory ceremonies were opened by the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the audience, led by Bert Granoff, before the stage microphone. Mr. Granoff —in the absence of Audrey Sieber, still confined to the hospital—then introduced Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the District Board of Commissioners, who made the principal address of welcome to the Calvert and the local Warner interests that had made it possible, headed by John J. Payette, local zone manager, and A. Julian Brylawski, in charge of Warner real estate developments in Washington.

Introduces Localite.

Commissioner Hazen, in turn, introduced Myron Walker, president of the Glover Park Citizens Association, who also made felicitous remarks concerning the coming of the Calvert to the vicinity of Wisconsin avenue and Calvert street.

Music was provided for an hour before the beginning of the inaugural program by a "salon ensemble" conducted by Alexander Podnos. This group of instrumentalists was heartily encored while visitors to the theater were inspecting its many modern beauties.

The chief screen feature of the dedicatory bill was the Warner Brothers production of "The Prince and the Pauper," based on the story by Mark Twain. The principal roles in this subject are played by those remarkably identical Mauch Twins, Billy and Bobby, and Errol Flynn, the handsome young actor not so long ago erroneously reported slain in Spain. In the supporting cast are such admirable players as Claude Rains, Henry Stephenson, Barton MacLane, Alan Hale, Lionel Pape, Murray Kinnell, Halliwell Hobbes, Ivan Simpson, Montagu Love, Fritz Leiber and Elspeth Dudgeon.

"The Prince and the Pauper" will be the attraction on the screen at the Earle Theater for the week beginning a week from today. It was given a one-time running at the Calvert last night. It will be completely reviewed in this space at the time of its opening at the Earle.

Supplementaries Amusing.

Supplementing the major feature last night were a new issue of the Pathe News, in which King George VI made it almost painfully apparent what a poor public speaker he is; a cartoon comedy, in color, "Ain't We Got Fun?" and the formal exercises already outlined.

The Calvert should be welcomed by the residents of the locality in which it is located as a worthy addition to the growing list of the Capital's worthier amusements places.

The theater was designed by John Eberson, the man who looks like a twin of the late Victor Herbert, and was erected by a syndicate under the presidency of Joseph Makover. It will be operated as a Warner Brothers unit, under the house managership of Alan J. Bacharach.

National

At the National Theater last night Ruth Draper offered seven of her inimitable "character sketches" to make up a program full of dramatic contrasts.

The first subject presented was "Three Generations In a Court of Domestic Relations," with which Washington already is familiar. The next was "At an English House Party," and then, after a brief intermission, were presented "Le Retour De L'Aveugle" and "Doctors."

A second intermission was followed by "Three Imaginary Folk Songs," a charming bit of creative work on the part of the author-actress: "A Slovak Lullaby," "To a Swedish Polka" and "An Arabian Beggar's Chant."

After this trilogy, Miss Draper offered "Love in the Balkans" and "A Scottish Immigrant at Ellis Island," a humorous study that was not without its suggestion of pathos.

Tonight's bill will be a repetition of Monday night's opening catalogue of sketches, featured by "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," in which the uni-dramatist appears as secretary, wife and inamorata of the "Mr. Clifford," who, of course, never is seen on the stage.

Miss Draper shares with Cornelia Otis Skinner the distinction of being able to people her stage with invisible, but nonetheless recognizable, characters. Hers is an artistry that few have attained on the modern stage.

'Girls Club' Proves Clever Screen Comedy

New Picture at Belasco Given High Rating as Sophisticated Fun.

A moviegoer, confused as to where the line is drawn between art and vulgarity, after reading recent news accounts of opposition to burlesque a la Minsky, might do well to attend the current performance of "Girls' Club" at the Belasco.

Jacques Deval has transformed an idea most writers wouldn't ponder over five minutes, into an amusing, sophisticated comedy.

The brain child was created after Mr. Deval had wondered how a girls' club might be conducted. Then supposing a rich American woman had left a legacy with which to build a home, or club, in Paris, where young ladies might live, free from men and other evil temptations, while seeking their fortunes in the French city, he wrote his story. The club was to be equipped with all the modern means of entertainment for young women (except men), and to be managed by a good-hearted woman who understood all of the problems a young woman might have after leaving home.

The woman drawing the job thinks that the only trouble a young girl can get into is a melancholy stomach from eating green apples, thus creating most of the comedy that follows.

The club hires a woman doctor who later proves to be a godsend in settling problems for the members.

Anyone laboring under the impression that the French have no sense of humor should surely attend the showing of this really fine picture.

The fact that it is spoken entirely in French and interpreted on the screen by subtitles, as in the old silent pictures, does not detract from the entertainment in the least. A person with no knowledge of French can, from the acting, tell what is going on—and can enjoy a show with 200 beautiful girls in it in any language!

Rep. Norton Assails Huff Appointment

The District Commissioners were criticized yesterday by Chairman Mary Norton, of the House District Committee, for their appointment of Ray L. Huff as superintendent of penal institutions.

"I have always favored promotion from within the ranks," she said, "and ever since becoming acquainted with the way Lorton Reformatory is run, I have been impressed with the qualifications of Col. William L. Peak, the present superintendent. I had hoped he would succeed Capt. Barnard."

Meanwhile, the last obstacle to Huff's eligibility seemed removed when District officials unofficially declared both he and his wife, Florence, could hold jobs in the District government. Mrs. Huff is supervisor of the Pennsylvania avenue branch of the Public Assistance Division.

Jewish Youth's Aid To Brethren Asked

Jewish youth of Washington was called upon to do its share to aid less fortunate brethren in other lands at a United Jewish Appeal rally at the Jewish Community Center last night.

Speakers at the meeting, held under the auspices of the youth division of the drive, included Co-chairmen Hy Lytton and Elizabeth Kaufman, and William Levy, who came to this country from Germany a few months ago. Levy stressed the importance of the young Jewish people of today getting a thorough understanding of Judaism.

The youth division, with approximately 200 members enrolled, will attempt to raise at least $3,000 this year towards the United Jewish Appeal goal of $80,000. The first drive luncheon will be held today at the center.

12 Pittsburgh Firemen Hurt in 4-Alarm Blaze

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP).—A four-alarm fire swept through Pittsburgh's industrial strip district today, injuring Fire Chief Nicholas Phelan and 11 other firemen. Several hundred workers in the area were forced to flee.

The blaze started in a warehouse and spread rapidly to the plant of the Pittsburgh Box Co. next door. About 100 men in the plant escaped.

Dr. Freeman Installs Dean Of Washington

150 Clergymen Participate in Ceremony Investing Dr. Powell.

With 150 clergymen from the District, Maryland and Virginia participating in the ceremony, the Very Rev. Noble Cilley Powell was installed in the office of Dean of Washington before more than 1,800 persons yesterday afternoon in Washington Cathedral.

The dean until recently the rector of Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church in Baltimore, accepted the charge of his new office from the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who conducted the installation rite.

"On this Ascension Day I approached this ceremony with deep personal joy," declared the bishop, describing Dean Powell as "one who has come to us out of an interesting and varied experience."

"Already," said Bishop Freeman, "he has won our admiration and tender affection."

Dean Powell will serve the cathedral in the capacity of vicar of administration.

Dr. Powell was presented by the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips, D. D., rector of the Church of the Epiphany, and the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, trustee of the Cathedral Foundation.

Dr. Powell is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and was chaplain there for 12 years before going to Baltimore. He is a native of Lowndesboro, Ala.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The Interstate Male Chorus, under the direction of Clyde B. Aitchison, gives its second concert of the season Thursday evening in the Departmental Auditorium, with Ina Holtzscheiter, soprano, as guest soloist.

As is usual when the singing members of the Interstate Commerce Commission Club present a public program, they were greeted last evening by an audience that filled the hall and accorded them abundant applause. The fact that this was their forty-fifth concert testifies to the true amateur spirit that animates them, for music is to them an avocation and a surcease from schedules and rates. Under the leadership of Commissioner Aitchison, they sing with a gusto that bespeaks a genuine enjoyment.

The program began with a chorus that ranks in England almost as a patriotic hymn, "Land of Hope and Glory," the adaptation of a poem by Arthur Christopher Benson to the trio from Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance" military march in D major. In contrast to its resounding stateliness came Heinrich Riva's arrangement of Schubert's lovely lyric, "Du bist die Ruh'."

Variety was the order of the evening, for the atavistic accents of Frank Mair's setting of Suomi's song from "The Kalevala" came next to Easthope Martin's rollicking "Come to the Fair," and Deems Taylor's arrangement of the fourteenth century hymn, "Concordia Laetitia," was a neighbor to Forsyth's "The Lawyer's Invocation to Spring."

The major item on the program was Dudley Buck's cantata, "Chorus of Spirits and Hours," with a text from Shelley's "Prometheus Unbound." Ross Farrar was the soloist in a performance that had dignity and dramatic effectiveness. The remaining numbers were Georg Henschel's "Morning Hymn," Jacques Wolfe's "Shortnin' Bread," Jose Padilla's "Princesita," Arthur Foote's "Irish Folksong," and Humphrey J. Stewart's "The Forging of the Anchor." One regrets that an English text was used in Padilla's song, for the translation was utterly inadequate.

Accompanied by Marjorie Davis, Ina Holtzscheiter sang Bizet's "Ouvre ton coeur," which is not from "Carmen" as the program stated; Richard Hageman's "At the Well," Wintter Watts' "The Little Shepherd's Song" and Granville Bantock's "The Feast of Lanterns." Her voice has clarity, freshness and accurate pitch.

'Planned Play' Urged at P.-T. Closing Session

Community-Wide Program Discussed as National Conference Ends.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., May 6.—"Planned play," not only for youth but for parents and teachers, was urged tonight by Dr. Edouard C. Lindemann, of the New York School of Social Work, in a talk on "Modern Trends in Community Recreation" at the closing session of the forty-first annual convention of the National Parent-Teacher Association.

"The importance of working out a community-wide recreational program for every member of the family cannot be over-emphasized," said the professor who is also WPA director of recreation projects. "It should be planned for fathers and mothers as well as for sons and daughters."

Earlier today at a conference on recreation, conducted by J. W. Faust, national chairman of recreation, leisure time programs were allied with the theme of the convention, "The Place of the Home in the Community." Faust discussed the need of such programs in the home and community, and also stressed the importance of family support of municipal recreational programs.

"Interpreting Education in Our Democracy" was discussed today at another conference, directed by Miss Charl Ormond Williams of Washington, P.-T. A. national chairman of education. "Training in today's democracy must count for something far more important than equipping an individual to make money," Miss Williams pointed out. "Schools today have the responsibility of training children along the line of democratic thinking. Progressive steps in education must be guided to fit this need."

Social Changes Noted.

Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, Washington scholar and writer, talked on "Educational Implications in the Changing Social Order" at this conference. He stressed that modern education is deeply involved in the struggle to preserve the democratic way of life.

Consideration of the New London (Tex.) school disaster featured the second half of the safety conference conducted this afternoon by Miss Marian Telford, of New York, national safety chairman. Dr. David J. Price, engineer of the Department of Agriculture, who has been engaged for over 35 years in the study of fires and explosions, suggested plans to prevent these "horror makers" in schools.

Among others taking part in the safety conference was Albert W. Whitney, vice president of the National Safety Council, New York, who deplored "the defeatist attitude about traffic accidents."

Declaring that "traffic safety begins at home," Miss Telford, in a brief talk before the morning assembly, stressed that "solution to traffic problems does not lie in the courts but in the individual who learns to heed parking and pedestrian rules. We must first educate ourselves, then our children, and then the community at large."

Student aid, mental hygiene, radio as an educational aid, and music were other subjects threshed out at conferences today.

The District of Columbia ranked first among States in Class F, having the largest percentage of local units carrying through the 1936 summer round-up of children, major health project of the P.-T. A. congress. Announcement of this was made this afternoon by Miss Ruth Bottomly, of Washington, D. C., summer round-up secretary.

At a meeting late today three Washington residents were re-elected as national P.-T. A. chairmen: Miss Charl Ormond Williams, school education; Miss Ellen C. Lombard, home education; Miss Florence Fallgatter, homemaking; Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, legislation. These and other new national officers were formally installed at the meeting tonight.

Pilgrimages to Jamestown, Yorktown and Williamsburg and special meetings of the executive committee and the national board of managers will round out the post-convention program tomorrow.

Women's Group Denies Spanish Rebel Alliance

The women's committee to aid the children of Spain, which is giving a dance at the Washington Hotel tonight, announced yesterday that they are not connected with the American committee for Spanish relief which has been termed a "pro-rebel" group by the Spanish Ambassador.

The women's committee is identified with the medical bureau to aid Spanish democracy, which is sending supplies to Spain to immunize children in the war area.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, May 6.—It strikes me that Robert Taylor is paying too exorbitantly for an "act of God" over which he has no control. The guy is being crucified because he is unduly handsome. He has become the target of unkind publicity through every medium of public expression. If it continues, I fear it will have one of two effects: (1) It may break down his confidence in himself, or (2) it may sour him on life.

TAYLOR, ROBERT

On his return from a recent trip, Bob said to me, "I'd like to have a mountain cabin in which to hide out until the public finds a new toy. I feel like I'd been clawed by wildcats." The remark was not made with any show of resentment. Rather, it reflected mental confusion.

A studio press agent who accompanied Taylor on his trip tells me that Bob took rough neck jibes that were enough to call for pistols at dawn. Had the actor resented them physically—more headlines and terse wires from studio bosses. "All the women wanted to kiss him," the press agent said, "and most of the men wanted to fight him."

In years gone by, I watched Wallace Reed and Rudolph Valentino struggle through the same maelstrom of adulation and abuse, which seem to go hand in hand. It is this controversy of opinion that makes a movie star front page copy. Anything that is written about him, good or bad, will find sympathizers. I wonder how often Bob gets that panicky feeling that success is not worth it all, yet he dares not release his grip. Like a man holding on to the tail of a mad bull. Hell if he hangs on, and hell if he lets go.

The Chamber of Commerce will not relish this remark which Andy Devine alleges his young son made. Maybe the youngster did say it, too, because that proud gleam in Papa Devine's eye looked authentic. At any rate, after weeks of rainy, foggy weather in California, the sun came out one day. And the young Devine (so vows Andy) led his parent to the window, pointed to Old Sol, and inquired, "Daddy, what's that?"

I think this is funny, even though it has cost me money. Before Joe E. Brown departed on his last cross-country trip, he said, "I'll bet I can send you a letter from every town I visit on this trip, and it won't cost me the price of a stamp!" I wagered a dinner he could not do it—and I owe him a dinner. Here is how Joe tricked me: He addressed his envelopes to Jimmie Fidler, Hollywood, Calif., and in the return address he wrote precisely the same. Then he mailed the envelopes without stamps. You know what happened, of course: Uncle Sam came to me for "postage due" every time one of those letters arrived.

Over tea and cinnamon toast one recent day, Grace Moore told me of a time in her life when she literally "lived by her wits." A roadshow stranded and she used up all but $1.60 of her money getting back to New York City. Hungry and tired, she read in a newspaper that a titled woman had just left for Europe. She conceived the smart idea of going to this woman's former Park avenue apartment house, where she told the manager that she was a friend of the departed lady who had recommended that she (Grace) rent the vacated quarters. The impressed manager leased her the apartment willingly.

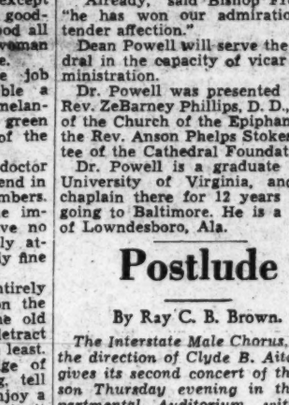
"I was scared silly," Grace laughingly recalled, "but I was also hungry. So I bluffed it out by calling the most exclusive restaurant in town and ordering that dinner be sent up. My swanky address turned the trick; the restaurant extended me a charge account. A girl chum and I lived and ate that way for a week, knowing what eventually would happen. Then a gift from Heaven came in the form of a job, but it was months before I could pay my bill."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The great advantage of having two long suits when declarer is that each can be used as a support to the other. When the trump suit breaks badly, the long side suit can be used to force out the adverse trumps; when the side suit breaks badly, the trumps suit can be used to help establish it. But when both suits break badly the touch of the master is needed. Note South's line of play in today's hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠
3 ◇	3 ♠	4 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened a spade and South won with the King. Seeing no immediate danger, he first tried to draw trumps by leading the King of diamonds. West discarded a low heart and East played low. Noting the bad trump break, South decided to set up his side suit under protection of dummy's trumps.

Accordingly he laid down the Ace of clubs and followed up with a low club! This simple but remarkable play assured the contract regardless of the club break.

As the hand was played, West won the club lead and returned a spade to South's Ace. Declarer then led another low club and trumped with dummy's ten of diamonds. Whether or not East overtrumped was immaterial. The club suit was established and South continued with his task of drawing the trumps.

Had South led three rounds of trumps before tackling the clubs, East would have won the third round with his Ace of diamonds and returned the suit, thus preventing South from ruffing any clubs in the dummy. Even though South abandoned trumps, he still had to be careful to lead only one high club, for East would have been delighted at the opportunity of ruffing a high club and leading out the rest of his trumps. Either of these slips would have cost South the game.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Navy Wife" Would Have Told "Midshipman" That Ensign Goes Farthest Who Attracts Fewest Girls.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter signed, "Midshipman," published in your column of May 4, prompts me to attempt my first letter of this type. I don't believe I would have advised him just as you did. He might find your suggestions all too successful, which might bring a peck of trouble tumbling down upon him and seriously interfere with what might otherwise have been a brilliant career in the Navy.

• • • •

I judge from his letter, in which he speaks of four years' correspondence with girls, that he will graduate June 3 and after a month's leave will join the fleet and, under present regulations, will not be permitted to marry for two years. So why start worrying about girls not taking him seriously for a while yet? Personally, I would consider him one of the most fortunate members of the graduating class—if that is the class to which he belongs

• • • •

In his present heart-whole state he can leave here to join his first ship with no heartbreaking farewells to be made and can report aboard ship with a free heart and mind, and be ready to devote himself completely to his new duties and responsibilities—which will be many. Day dreaming of a lovely pair of eyes and a sweet smile many miles away will not help him to concentrate on his many duties and may bring a sharp rebuke from some senior officer.

• • • •

After graduating in June, these boys will put on that new ensign's uniform with the one gold stripe on the sleeve and they are going to feel very proud of themselves, as well they may. Many of them are going to resent the fact that the Government prohibits them for two years from marrying that lovely and beautifully dressed girl of their choice who sat in Dahlgren Hall and beamed so proudly upon them as they were handed their diploma. Most of them have no idea what a favor the Government is doing them in this matter.

• • • •

If "Midshipman" were to take a stroll around Annapolis some weekend and keep his eyes open he would see what I mean. Or he might drop around to my house and I would be glad to show him. Hundreds of girls arriving for the weekend, bring with them their very finest gorments, usually with never a thought that an umbrella and slicker might come in handy as part of their luggage. It is not unusual to see them strolling about with their particular "Middie" in a downpour, their lovely fur coats, new spring suits and hats simply dripping, and not caring much—as father will replace them. In the evening they are out again, exquisite evening gowns trailing in the dirt of the sidewalks, for midshipmen are not permitted to ride in cars.

• • • •

These clothes could never be replaced on an ensign's pay. In fact, a married ensign's pay won't cover much more than the bare necessities of life, such as rent, food and insurance. So the Government is really giving them two years to get their bearings and understand these things before they take on the responsibilities of marriage.

• • • •

I know what I am talking about. You see, my husband is a Naval officer and this two-year restriction on marriage was not in effect when he graduated. So we married on an ensign's pay with all the confidence in the world and very soon realized what we had taken on. We survived but we still remember very vividly how a trip to the dentist or doctor, or even an occasional dinner and movie would completely wreck the monthly budget; and how a new flower or belt had to make last year's evening gown do for another season.

• • • •

Lucky, I say, is the midshipman who hasn't any serious heart interest when he graduates. It may not be unusual that girls treat him as a brother when he looks exactly like 2,300 other midshipmen, but he will no doubt take on stature and importance as an officer in the fleet and will have more girls interested in him than he will have time to see. There is something about that gold braid and those brass buttons that gets 'em sooner or later, and he will know that he has two years in which to pick and choose. I hope "Midshipman" gets the right one. NAVY WIFE.

DEAR NAVY WIFE: I don't doubt that a navy man's career is greatly advantaged by a reasonable period of bachelor apprenticeship, but I can't agree that the boy who puts out to sea with no fair young thing looking forward eagerly to his letters, his return and his rapid ascent up the ladder of fame and fortune is necessarily better equipped to succeed than his fellow who says goodbye to his sweetheart with a choke in his throat. As between the two, I should say the latter had the greater incentive to hew to the line of traditional duty and get to the top by the shortest route. Being wholly interested in one girl, isn't he apt to be less interested in all girls and thus avoid the escapades which light flirtations often lead to?

I think any nice boy of 22 is a better man for possessing the self confident ability to compel the serious attention of a really nice girl. Thus equipped, he is far less likely to make a hasty or ill-advised marriage than the youth who, lacking this margin of leisurely self assurance, is apt—in very loneliness and self distrust—to propose some day to the first girl who will have him, never stopping to consider whether she comes up to his needs and expectations, or whether she can adorn and expedite his career.

• • • •

Since "Midshipman" is so constituted that he yearns for "normal love affairs at this age" and feels that he is "missing the best of life" in not having them now, it would have been begging the question (in my opinion) and offering poor substitute consolation to tell him that his lack of social technique may be all for the best. I shall be pleased indeed if such suggestions as I offered will enable him to become master of any romantic encounter in which he many engage, for I believe that encouraging sense of confidence born of success in any given endeavor carries over into the broad field of the individual's every endeavor.

• • • •

The loneliest persons in the world are not those who are far away from home and family and the best beloved; but those who, in the midst of familiar surroundings and associates, distrust their own ability to win and hold love. For the first knows where to find love, but the latter, in the words of "Midshipman," goes through life "feeling lost." M. H.

Men Will Sport Modernistic Braces With Linen Suits

New York, (AP).—Between now and the closing days of summer, a lot of America's well-dressed men are going to sport braces splashed with Charvet patterns, matching the new season Charvet ties. In case you didn't know, Charvet patterns, named after the Parisian modernist who originated them, are derived in imitation of such natural objects as leaves and flowers but look more like lightning hitting twice in the same place.

The new Charvet braces are meant to be worn with white summer suits and utilize deep blues and browns on white backgrounds. Other bright brace ideas make the most of plaids, checks and sugar and spice effects in deep and dusty tones. White and natural fabric colors will be plentiful.

Many of the new suspenders for summer are either ultra-wide or ultra-narrow, with the trends existing for the same reason—warm weather comfort.

Ballot More Reliable Than Charm, They Say

Two leading feminists of Latin-America are Dr. Consuelo Bernardino (below), who has come to the United States for a year's special study in gyneology as holder of a scholarship given by the American Association of University Women, and Miss Minerva Bernardino (right), who is here studying the political and economic position of the American woman.

Latin American Women Awaken, Seek Economic Independence

By Malvina Lindsay.

JUST at a time when glamour is the reputed craze of the moment in the United States, women of Latin America, symbols of feminine enchantment and the sheltered life, are beginning to question whether charm pays such large dividends after all. They are beginning to wonder if some money in the bank, some property in their own names, a share in the custody and control of their children—yes, and even the ballot—might be preferable to so many serenades under balconies and the uncertain largesse of men providers.

They are soft-voiced and smiling about it—if two of their representatives in Washington, the gifted and courageous Bernardino sisters may be taken as examples—but they are tenacious and determined underneath and afire with missionary zeal.

Reminiscent of the pioneers in the women's causes in this country are Miss Minerva and Dr. Consuelo Bernardin, of Santo Domingo, who when they were children decided that their lives would be dedicated to improving the condition of their countrymen.

A mother with advanced ideas who died when Minerva was 15 had instilled in them the ideals they are now carrying on. A father who had the courage to defy tradition and custom and tell his daughters to go alone to the theater (a shocking procedure!) because it would make them "independent," furthered the work the mother had begun.

Holds Scholarship.

Now, still in their 20s, both young women are known in feminist circles of both North and South America. Dr. Consuelo Bernardino, 24 years old, holder of the Latin-American scholarship of the American Association of University Women, has just arrived in Washington preparatory to entering an American university for a year of special study in gynecology. She is one of five women physicians in the Dominican Republic and is outstanding for her public health work.

Miss Minerva Bernardino, the elder sister, is making a special study of the position and activities of American women as a training for her further feminist campaigns in her country. A member of the Inter-American Commission of Women, she is co-operating with Miss Doris Stevens, of the National Woman's Party here. She was a delegate to the Montevideo Conference of 1933 and has traveled throughout South America studying the woman question.

"Women are waking up all through Latin-America," she related enthusiastically. "They want more protection."

Protection! Her questioner was puzzled. Wasn't that the very thing these sheltered women of the Latin countries had?

No, indeed! Not in her eyes. She didn't call it protection for a woman not to be able to have a cent in the bank without her husband's permission, not to be able to own or inherit property, to have any rights over children, to have no say in the government, no civil or economic rights. The protection of the home was like charm—all right as far as it went, but a very unreliable thing to support one through life. Didn't all women inevitably find sooner or later that they were safer and happier—standing on their own feet.

Disease Problem.

Dr. Consuelo, girlish, smiling but very earnest, took up the argument. What about the women of her country who silently reaped the toll of social diseases because of a traditional false modesty that kept them from receiving proper medical attention? What about the prenatal and maternity aid they needed? The knowledge to bring up healthy children? The young woman doctor told of her plans to return to her native country and devote her life to helping stamp out venereal disease. Her countrywomen, she pointed out, would consult a woman physician where they would not go to a man because of the traditional attitude on such matters.

Dr. Consuelo praised the new social welfare and health program that has been announced by the President of the Dominican Republic. She hopes to help in this program on her return home.

Both sisters believe that the desire of the Latin-American women to make their own livings to become economically independent is promoting feminine advancement throughout Latin America. In Santo Domingo women are rapidly increasing in the professions and in industrial life, and even married women are working. This is expeced to hasten suffrage both in Santo Domingo and other Latin-American countries in which women do not have the vote.

Miss Minerva Bernardino has campaigned extensively in her native country for votes for women. She also was the first woman inspector of public instruction in Santo Domingo. While making her studies in Washington she is serving as secretary to the Minister of Paraguay. Her sister will visit her for several weeks at 1827 Sixteenth street before beginning her medical studies.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

"WHAT do you think!" exclaimed an excited voice over the phone this morning. "I've made a slip cover!" She might have been announcing that she'd drawn a perfect circle free hand or won a million dollar contest. So proud was she.

Well, we knew how she felt. A slip cover is an achievement, a really nice one we mean that fits like a tailored suit.

Slip cover fashions and fabrics are changing. Timidly a few weeks ago we reported that early indications pointed to the use of more chintzes to match than in recent seasons when everybody went in for contrasts in such a big way. It's been a great relief to see that exhibits continue to bear out our first impressions. Just last week we attended previews of three different series of model rooms decorated by the people who set the styles and each of them presented slip covers all of the same fabric for a room. In one interior especially were we delighted with the way the chintz was ensembled . . . a fabric with a leafy green pattern on a champagne ground was used for sofa and chairs. As it happened, it was a bordered material, and the border was cut off to finish the draperies which were of plain champagne-colored fabric. The same border made the valance too.

But this doesn't mean that slip covers have to match. And if your room happens to need contrast, don't hesitate to have it. Here are a few suggestions for combining fabrics of different patterns.

It's risky to use two different florals, both of about the same size. If you want to combine florals, use a big sprawling bouquet pattern with a small all-over conventional flower motif and with a third material in a stripe. A floral of average scale is nice with a horizontal stripe and an interesting textural fabric. A dominant plaid is better when used with textural fabrics or plain or with indistinct stripes. Be as careful of contrasts of all stripes or all plaids as you would of all florals. On the other hand if you have a keen eye for color, you can have all the pieces in solid colors that contrast.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's bulletin, "How to Make a Slip Cover That Won't Wrinkle or Bag."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Blood Transfusions.

Not very long ago I was waiting in Ann Arbor for a bus to go to Detroit, when a young man picked me up in an automobile and offered to carry me in for a small sum. On the way in we got into conversation, and among other things he told me that he was able to augment his income from time to time by giving blood for transfusion to patients in the hospital. He was one of a large group of so-called professional donors who are available in nearly any large medical center.

Donors Are Grouped.

In New York, London, Paris and Berlin, at least, all of these donors are grouped in a society under a board of medical control. The bureau has available at all times suitable donors for immediate transfusion of patients under the care of hospitals, and physicians who are members of the organization. They are given a fee of $7 for each 100 c.c. of blood, and are not used again until a period of time has expired corresponding in weeks to the number of 100 c.c. amounts of blood drawn (one week for each 100 c.c.). Regular laboratory and medical re-examinations of the donors are made. They are instructed by lectures and assigned lessons in the principles and details of blood transfusion, and their lives are so supervised that patients are completely protected. Similar organizations may be expected before long of those who can give convalescent serum for diseases such as infantile paralysis, in which convalescent serum is beneficial.

New Development.

This is quite a new development in medical practice. Blood transfusions have been used for a number of years. In fact, they were started several hundred years ago, but were not successful because the principles were not understood. The blood of the lower animals was used to be transfused into man, which is dangerous and useless. It was found also that the blood of certain individuals did not mix well with others. For this reason, donors and recipients have to be typed. The young man with whom I was riding knew exactly what type he was and with what type patients his blood could be used.

This is a great improvement on the time when, if a transfusion was to be given, everybody in the family was hurriedly called together and typing proceeded until the proper one was found. Inasmuch as transfusion is, in many instances, an emergency remedy, it is highly important that proper donors should be available at a moment's notice. Time lost in selecting a donor from a crowd of unknowns may mean the difference between life and death.

Transfusion is used for so many things now, and is so routine a part of hospital practice, that such organization is quite necessary.

Ginger Ale Ice Treat When Made in 'Agitator'

Ginger ale ice made the "agitated way" is a delicious treat; and it is so quickly frozen when made in one of the new easy-to-operate ice cream freezers.

To make, dissolve 1 cup granulated sugar in 1 cup boiling water and cool. Add ¾ cup lemon juice, ¾ cup orange juice and 1 pint ginger ale. Assemble modern ice cream freezer. Pour the mixture into the freezing container, adujust dasher and cover tightly. Then fill the ice chamber with a mixture of chipped ice and salt. (Use 3 parts ice to 1 part salt by volume. Remember, the right combination of ice and salt is one of the factors that make for quick freezing.) When frozen, remove ice around top of container, carefully remove cover and lift out the dasher. Pack carefully with a spoon. Then cover container with wax paper and replace lid. Drain off water and replenish ice and salt mixture. Cover and allow to harden at least one hour before serving.

Soap and Warm Water First-Aids to Beauty

In the art of make-up, what you take off is just as important as what you pout on. Only by starting with a clean face can you hope to do a good job of camouflaging nature's shortcomings.

For thorough cleansing your best bet is soap and warm water, authorities on skin care say. Work up a good lather, rub it in well with your finger tips, then rinse with warm water and finish with a clear, cold splash. Pat your face dry with a clean towel, then go ahead with your favorite beautifiers.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 6.

WHEN ANN HARDING and her new husband chugged into the Grand Central Terminal not long ago, your haggard correspondent was among those who had her shiny nose pressed against the gate to welcome the ash-blonde star. Like most women, I have always had much interest in and affection for La Belle Harding, partly because of her domestic woes and partly because her movie career has never been as successful as the girl's high talents merit.

ALICE HUGHES.

Well, it would have done your heart good to see the smiling Ann now. I never saw her look so happy or so pretty, as she and Werner Janssen posed patiently for the flashlight-poppers. I could see that she was off to a fresh start in her life and work, and it made me glad.

This Janssen of hers is a very notable fellow—probably more famous in Europe than in his own land. His father, August Janssen, is one of our most noted restaurateurs—you've probably seen his sign and slogan, "Janssen Wants to See You." But young Werner would have none of the business of vending good food and drink. He took up the study of music, specializing in the art of waving the little stick, and though still a young man is justly famed as an interpreter of Sibelius, the Finn. It is probable that before long he will be known as our finest native conductor—if he is not so already.

He has a lad of 12 out in Culver, while Ann's little girl is eight. With a nice young family, the newly-married couple have youth, modest affluence and good on their side. Good luck to them both, say we!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Park avenue still shudders over that horrid incident which took place in its beloved and very uppity Cafe Larue! Mrs. Cuppie Seymour, accompanied by two of her sisters, entered this elegant beanery and laid lustily about her husband, William, whom she suspected of skullduggery, with a dog whip! Merciful goodness! was the general thought. Such didoes on the right side of the tracks! But William forgave the three ladies and bailed them out of the cooler. "My wife is easily excited," he said soothingly. "And she was mistaken about my dining alone with a blonde." But Park Avenue still dithers! . . .

How the fad books pour across the counters! Now it's "Oh Fiddlestix," compounded by Sylvia Brown, who claims the championship of that currently-popular game (which was Jackstraws when I was what Time calls a moppet). All right, Sylvia, so you're the champion. So then what? . . . .

I am left utterly frigid by the report that there are now over 35,000,000 telephones in the world. More than that many ring my house-office every week. It's an under statement. . . .

• • • •

Suddenly the handsome and rather amazing Pearl S. Buck, "The Good Earth" girl, pops up as a playwright! She tells me she has pounded out two drammers—one called "'The Empress" for Katharine Cornell, and another titled "Flight Into China." Pearl is a busy girl since she settled among us as a literary light and the wife of her publisher . . .

• • • •

I'm often reminded that love can be a terrible thing. Only today I find that Mr. James McCrory of here, enraged past all bearing because his best girl locked the front door against him, poked a lighted match through the key hole, set fire to some curtains and nearly burned down the house! Sometimes don't you think true friendship is best, after all? . . .

I, for one, am still agog over the astonishing slimming of Princess Juliana of the Netherlands! She left the church after her marriage a pudgy bride, and returns to the Hague 23 pounds lighter, with a streamlined figger and a grand collection of tasteful clothes! I wonder if we should cherchez le husband in this matter? Or did Julie just make up her own mind? Do you suppose if I dropped her a genteel note she'd let us in on the secret? I now nominate her as No. 1 woman of '37! My gracious—23 actual pounds!

POOR MARGIE! Is she to be handicapped all her life because she missed college?

Dick's bored by Margie's empty mind. He is charmed by Sue. Her cultural background makes her a stimulating companion.

Dick and Sue chat merrily about new American novels. They compare them to older English tales; delve excitedly into their historical background, psychological traits of the characters, philosophy of the authors.

But what does Margie know of literature and philosophy and psychology? Her lame comments show up her lack of culture.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

"Here I am all packed and just about to leave for the station, and I really don't want to go. Washington is so perfectly gorgeous just now, and all my friends seem to be arriving in town within the next few weeks"—thus spoke Dorothy Lee Ward yesterday before she left on the first stage of her round-the-world trip. She sails Monday on the S. S. Coolidge with the first stop at Pekin, where she will again lease the lovely old temple house up in the western hills which she occupied two years ago. Then on to India, Ceylon, Madras, Jodphur and on to Italy, Austria, with a visit to one of the more famous spas near Vienna, and Paris where her niece, Florence Ward Cauthen, will join her in October.

When Dorothy was making out her tags she shocked her listeners as well as herself with the information that she was not the least bit thrilled with the prospect, but plans had been made and so on and so forth—turning to Florence she said, "Don't you wish I were writing your name on these tags instead of mine?"

"No," hurriedly replied Florence, "I wish you were writing my name with yours."

"When the two travelers come back next autumn it will be just in time to find the lovely new French villa in Florida all finished, with even the orange grove growing as though it had been there for perfect ages. The home, Villa Suzanne, named for Mrs. Ward's mother, is on Allison Island and sounds like a dream house, with spacious terraces, dance floor that will accommodate 100 people; all sorts of intriguing wishing wells, and a deep tiled roof. It will be furnished with French and Oriental things. Among the rooms there will be an exact duplication of the exotic red and black room in Dorothy's Massachusetts avenue home here, only it will be larger.

Some whirlographs on Broderick Crawford's grand party yesterday afternoon at the Carlton—

Stella Akin, oh so chic in beige and brown frock and cape with an odd little dark brown straw hat fashioned with the brim rolled back making it square—

The whole W. W. Howes family there, the First Assistant Postmaster General, Hazel, little Mary Senate, and, of course, Johnny Stewart—

Broderick, who is such a huge success in "Woman Chases Man," is tall, fair and has merry gray eyes—telling someone that his name was Broderick Crawford, not vice versa, but that so many got mixed up in it that he was beginning to have his doubts as to which it was—

The whispers and rumors that exotic Anna May Wong was to arrive, someone pooh-poohing it at just precisely the moment that the lovely Oriental lady entered the door, wearing a native frock of pale lemon brocade—

Mrs. Ed Starling looking a fashion plate in her black outfit with cunning straw bonnet bordered with a rope of crepe—

J. Edgar Hoover taking time out from his demanding duties to enjoy informal chatting—

Evie Roberts laughing over her next few hectic days—riding all day today in the horse show out at Meadowbrook, taking a plane tonight for Louisville, seeing the race; back tomorrow night by plane and riding all day Sunday in the show again—

Helen Drury topping off her dark outfit with an unusual black and white hat made with a dark brim and white grosgrain crown, so designed that there is a quaint little point down on her forehead—

Senator Joseph Guffey looking very elegant in a brown suit—Bill McAvoy talking to the Turner Battles.

Meadowbrook to Draw Society Throng Today

Grounds Ready for Capital's Annual Horse Show; Entries Received From 15 States, District; Junior League Plans Entertainment.

All roads lead to Meadowbrook today, the scene of the Capital's sporting classic—the Washington Horse Show. All day yesterday vans rolled along the highway leading to the grounds, bringing champion hunters, jumpers and fine saddle horses. Today motor cars will bring diplomats, society folk, horse lovers and the customary crowd of railbirds to watch these same horses compete in the ring.

There will be crowds of spectators—and not all from town, for this year the entry list shows prize-winning horses from 15 States and the District, all competing for trophies and prizes to be awarded in the 60 events.

Everything is in readiness at the show grounds, the ring newly constructed with its regulation jumps, tier upon tier of reserved seats, the Junior League beer bar at one side, the refreshment booth at the west near the boxes.

Upstairs in the clubhouse one group of league members will put on a marionette show for the youngsters—oldsters, too. There will be pony rides, hoops, grab bags, balloons, all the usual ballyhoo without which no horse show would be complete. Junior League saleslgirls will be around and about, selling the official program and all sorts of oddments.

In the exhibitors' stand will be found Mrs. John Hay Whitney and her party, Miss Margaret Ann Warden, of Cleveland, whose stable will be presented by fine three and five gaited saddle horses; Mrs. D. N. Lee, a familiar figure at horse shows; Mrs. Edgar Mayer, who has come down from Greenwich to watch her May Top stable entries; Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep, of Bryn Mawr, whose Dark Dancer will probably add other "blues" to her collection; Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. John Ames, of North Easton, Mass., who has entered her great hunter, Auburn Prince. Never before have so many women shown at the show.

Judging starts at 10 o'clock; there will be recess for luncheon and afternoon classes get under way at 1 o'clock.

Visitors to D. C. Are Tea Guests

Reception Held for Those Here for Law Institute Meeting.

The annual reception and tea for those attending the fifteenth annual meeting of the American Law Institute was held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Chinese room of the Mayflower.

Wives of members of the council receiving the guests were Mrs. George E. Alter, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. Garrard Glenn, of Charlottesville, Va.; Mrs. Augustus N. Hand, Mrs. William D. Mitchell, Mrs. George Welwood Murray, Mrs. Thomas Day Thacher and Mrs. Cornelius W. Wickersham, all of New York; Mrs. Joseph C. Hutcheson, jr., of Houston, Tex.; Mrs. George Wharton Pepper, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Henry Upson Sims, of Birmingham, Ala.; also Mrs. Herbert F. Goodrich, of Philadelphia, whose husband is adviser on professional relations, and Mrs. William Draper Lewis, of Philadelphia, wife of the director.

Miss Wankowicz Returns.

Miss Irene Wankowicz, daughter of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, who was at the Ambassador Hotel in New York for a few days, has returned to Washington. Her engagement to Mr. Stanislaus Kazimierz Chosciak-Popiel, of Poland, was recently announced by her parents.

Dinners Planned Before Meeting of D. C. Dancing Club

Several dinners are being planned before the final meeting of the Friday Evening Dancing Club this evening at the Willard Hotel. Mme. Ulises Espaillat will entertain a party of friends, and others giving dinners include Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hendricks, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kremer and Mr. and Mrs. John McClure. Mrs. Peter Drury is entertaining at a cocktail party before the event.

Members of the committee will receive the guests. They include Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Mrs. William King, wife of Senator King; Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. William Culbertson, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and Mrs. Charles Riggs.

Shower Given Miss Spear.

Miss Margaret Spear, whose marriage to Cadet Charles Clagett will take place in June, was guest of honor at a surprise shower given yesterday by Mrs. Neitah King. Spring flowers decorated the rooms and a miniature bridal couple formed the centerpiece for the table. The gifts were brought to the bride-to-be in a large white hamper. There were 20 guests present.

Giant Airship Hindenburg, Funeral Pyre for Passengers and Crew, Burns Long After Crashing to Earth

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Disaster Called Blow to Experimentation; Roosevelt Sends His Condolences to Hitler

By Russell Smith

The Hindenburg disaster touched off with new fury the old debate over Government policy toward lighter-than-air ships last night, but the preponderance of Congressional opinion was that, in the words of Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, "this catastrophe will be a further setback in world experimentation in this field."

The disaster struck gloom through the Capital, gloom reflected in the words of President Roosevelt sent to Chancellor Hitler from the U. S. S. Potomac off the Texas coast:

"I have just learned of the disaster to the airship Hindenburg and offer you and the German people my deepest sympathy for the tragic loss of life which resulted from this unexpected and unhappy event."

Walsh, in an interview conducted later by Tom McCarthy, Post radio commentator, over Station WMAL, stressed that "our tragedies in this form of air transport resulted from structural defects, while the present disaster was the result of an explosion of hydrogen gas." He added the hope "this will not end all experimentation in this field."

A vocal minority contended, however, future American policy is unaffected by the explosion which wrecked the great ship. Representative Melvin J. Maas (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, who bears the sobriquet of the "flying Congressman," spoke for these when he pointed out that American experimentation in airships is based on use of helium gas.

"The explosion appears to have been the result of use of hydrogen gas," he said. "Unless I can be shown some reason other than this, some defect inherent in airships generally, I do not see why American policy should be affected."

With Walsh's statement, however, went those of Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and of Representative Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the corresponding House committee. Both said airship construction for military purposes will be discouraged.

Since Walsh is chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, this put the heads of all Congressional committees concerned on record against further airship construction with the exception of Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, who would not comment one way or the other last night.

In the past, however, Vinson has been inclined to adopt the Navy's view. This view, expressed in reports to the House committee on bills authorizing new construction, has been adverse since the Macon disaster to further Federal concern with these craft.

Vinson's only comment last night was that the Hindenberg tragedy is "most deplorable," in which he was joined by virtually all Washington officialdom and members of Congress.

Meanwhile, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, announced he will send Col. Roland E. Hartney, the committee's investigator, to the scene and said the committee, which has been studying air safety measures, will inquire into the tragedy.

Possibility of a special committee investigation was envisaged in the statement of Senator A. Harry Moore (Democrat), of New Jersey, he would introduce a resolution for an inquiry "if it transpires, after more facts are known, that there should be one."

Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper said he has dispatched Maj. R. W. Schroeder, assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, to Lakehurst.

Group Waiting To Board Ship Is Incredulous

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—They thought it was a joke.

Seventy men and women, watching their bags "weighed in" for the outgoing trip at midnight, wouldn't believe the Hindenburg had exploded.

Waiting in the lobby of the Biltmore Hotel for the taxi trip to Lakehurst, they grinned and giggled when newspapermen told them they wouldn't make the trip to Frankfort.

Most of them were women, coronation bound.

"They're kidding—it's their idea of a joke," a man cried.

But Mrs. Iva Mogridge, of Philadelphia, didn't think it so funny.

"I feel terrible about what may have happened to all those passengers," she said, "but, selfishly enough, I'm sorry I can't make the trip.

"I'd planned on this trip for months—and the coronation. I was going to fly directly from Frankfort to England. Now I won't make the trip."

The trip was to be the first in an airship for Mrs. W. F. Sharpe, of Hartford, Conn.

"What can I say? There'll be no trip, no coronation. I had no premonition of this. Perhaps I can get a boat tomorrow that will get to England in time for everything."

Alex Manetas, of Memphis Tenn., was going to his old home in Athens, Greece.

"I made the trip both ways last summer," he said, "but I'm not going to take it this time. I'm sorry."

"Thirty-two years ago, when I came to this country," he said, "it took me 96 days to reach New York. I decided to take the fastest way going back."

Hydrogen Blast Caused Crash, Naval Radio Dispatch Asserts

A hydrogen fire, which started near the stern of the giant dirigible Hindenburg, destroyed the world's largest airship with a loss of at least 48 lives, at Lakehurst, the Navy Department was informed in a radio report from the Naval Air Station at the scene of the disaster.

The official message came from Commander C. E. Rosendahl, commandant of the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, who asserted the great sky ship was completely in ruins.

At the same time the executive officer reported that the bodies of 19 unidentified dead had been recovered. The message was filed at 8:40 p. m.

Commander Rosendahl, in a message received at 10:35 p. m., reported that 20 out of a passenger list of 36 had survived the explosion. Surviving of a crew of 61 were 44, the commander reported from the scene of the disaster.

Of the surviving passengers, Rosendahl's message said, two are seriously injured.

Twenty-six bodies have been recovered, he reported, of which nine remained unidentified.

Seven persons who were known to be aboard the airship have not been accounted for, Rosendahl radioed.

His message said the fire had been extinguished.

His earlier message said:

"Hindenburg a total loss from hydrogen fire originating at or near the stern during landing operations at Lakehurst about 6:45 Eastern standard time today.

Air Bureau Took Steps to Protect Zeppelin in U. S.

Only two days ago elaborate airplane regulations were announced by the Department of Commerce to prevent any accident between the giant airship and swarms of planes carrying sightseers and cameramen. Planes were prohibited from flying within a mile of the Hindenburg while it was in flight, while only specially licensed planes could land at Lakehurst while the ship was moored there. No planes could land at the naval air station while the airship was departing and arriving.

Three weeks ago plans for renewed building of airships by American companies, intended for transatlantic service, were outlined at a committee hearing on Capitol Hill. Several groups outlined plans for constructing ships similar to the Hindenburg.

It costs over half a million more to make

SUPPOSE we started paring costs—short-cutting the methods we use in making Four Roses. We could save over half a million dollars a year.

But that we refuse to do... because it's the extra money we spend, and the extra trouble we take, that give Four Roses its all-round greatness.

To get that greatness, we select several straight whiskies—each distilled the slow (but costly!) old-fashioned way... each outstanding for some special virtue.

By blending these straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies!) together, we merge all their virtues into one whiskey magnificent in every whiskey virtue. And that's Four Roses!

"But it costs me so little more to buy!"

"IT only took one taste of Four Roses to assure me that I'd found the richest, mellowest whiskey I could ever hope to drink. So imagine my pleasure to learn Four Roses' price—only a quarter more a pint than the whiskies I used to buy!"

Weatherly's Homer in 8th Beats Nats, 4-2, Spoils Weaver's 5-Hit Game

Hits Homer To Help Win 8th Victory

West Virginia Is Held to One Hit in Last Eight Innings of Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Georgetown's hard-hitting Hoyas continued their drive toward the Eastern collegiate baseball crown yesterday, bludgeoning West Virginia's unsteady representatives into a 7-to-1 defeat at the Hilltop for their eighth straight victory.

Meanwhile the Blue and Gray racqueters got in a little paddy-whacking on their own account, disposing of the Mountaineer netmen by an 8-to-1 count on the home courts.

Toiling with the rhythm and power of an old Mississippi side-wheeler, "Big Mike" Petroskey subdued the visitors with a three-hit performance that was beautiful to behold, from a Georgetown viewpoint, and aided the attack with a home run. A trifle wobbly in the first inning, when touched for two hits and West Virginia's one run, but after that he couldn't be reached with a telegram.

One hit was the sum total of the invaders' bat-wielding in the last eight innings, and that was a scratchy roller to Tom Keating at shortstop. Mike fanned seven and walked two.

Georgetown, meanwhile, was fattening its collective and individual batting averages at Gocke's expense, assuming the lead with a belated fifth inning rally that produced four runs. Another run in the seventh and two more in the eighth clinched matters.

Nolan launched the initial drive, coaxing a pass with two down in the fifth and going to second on a delayed steal. "Smitty" Nau scored him with a business-like single to left, and scored in turn on Bassin's two-bagger to right. Harry reached third as Tucker fumbled the ball. Cavadine put the finishing touch to the rally with a line drive to left, which went for a home run when Scalli failed to make a shoe-string catch.

Nau scored in the seventh on his bunt, a stolen base and Cavadine's single to left. Petroskey, in person, took a hand in the eighth inning scores, blasting a home-run over the left-field barrier, scoring Ed Bodine ahead of him. The latter was on base by the grace of Barna's error on a throw from shortstop.

Keefer Cup Play Won by Mrs. Stokes

Marion Brown Wins Low Gross With Ellen Kincaid Runner-up.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, making her second start in District women's tournaments, shot an 84-8—76 yesterday at Chevy Chase, and paired with a first day's net of 80, won the sixth renewal of the Keefer Cup, donated by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, of the host club.

Mrs. Stokes also captured the gross award with 88-84, but chose the net trophy. Marion Brown, 16-year-old George Washington student, received the gross award with 89-86—175.

Miss Ellen Kincaid, youthful Congressional star, was second in both the low and gross prizes, shooting 90-86, and aided by an 8 handicap each round.

Mrs. Stokes, who just took up golf in the past few years, formerly played on the public links, but joined Indian Spring this year. She was out in 44 yesterday and returned in 40, including 3's on the tenth and fourteenth holes and a 4 on the difficult finishing hole.

Mrs. J. E. Nell, first day's leader, slipped to 101 and finished behind Miss Kincaid. Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Stearn, Mrs. Booker, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Rhyne, Mrs. Larkin and Mrs. Meckley were other net prize winners.

Mrs. W. D. Masten, defending champion, finished far down the list with a net total of 174. Mrs. Meckley, last year's gross winner, shot 87 yesterday, trailed by 5 strokes.

Canzoneri Underdog Against Lou Ambers

Champion 12-to-5 Choice Over Veteran in Fight Tonight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—Tony Canzoneri, in his day one of the greatest little scrappers ever to pull on a pair of leather mittens, goes after his old lightweight crown for the third time in a 15-round shooting match with Champion Lou Ambers in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

It will be one of the few times in his long ring career Tony has been the underdog in the betting against a man in his own division. The smart boys along the Great White Way were laying 12 to 5 on Ambers tonight with the possibility the odds may soar to 3 to 1 by post time.

Their belief that Tony has passed his peak and stands scant chance against the younger, faster buzz saw from up-State Herkimer, is based on the former champ's poor showing in his tuneup bouts.

Tony won all three, but he was extended to the limit in one and narrowly escaped being knocked out in another.

The Canzoneri camp, which conceded almost everything to Ambers except hitting power, expects to turn in a surprise tomorrow night and they hope the boys who are wagering so freely against Tony will not feel hurt when payoff time comes.

"Tony can hit just as well as he every did," said Manager Sammy Goldman, "and a fighter is never through as long as he can sock. One good smack on the chin will make everything right. We think Tony will stop Lou in six rounds."

Goldman insists Tony looked badly in his warm-ups because he needed the work and was sent into the ring with instructions to get as much as he could. Canzoneri stopped George Levy and Joe Zodda in seven heats and won an eight-round decision from Frankie Wallace.

Canzoneri has promised to quit the ring if he loses to Ambers again and retire to the life of a gentleman farmer on his big country place near Marlboro, N. Y.

Pair of Walks Help Indians Score 3 Runs in Fatal Inning

Ben Chapman Steals 2d, Then Steals Home on Bunt to 3d Base.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 6.—Washington's two-game winning streak disappeared today. To be specific both as to time and place, it disappeared over the rightfield wall at 4:50 p. m. in the eighth inning in company with a ball off the bat of Roy Weatherly, midget Cleveland outfielder.

It was all very tragic for the Nats who at the time were fondly contemplating a third straight victory, thanks to what apparently was a nice pitching job by Monte Weaver, the thin man. The Nats went into that eighth inning with a 2-1 lead and came out of it with a 4-2 licking.

There wasn't much alarm when Weaver put the tying run on base in the eighth with one out by walking Lyn Lary. He had walked four other hitters at various times, previously, and had always extricated himself nicely, but there was no defense against Weatherly's sock—unless Manager Bucky Harris had been able to foresee the thing and station one of his outfielders on a roof top across the road where Weatherly's homer eventually landed. Weatherly trotted gayly around the bases behind Lary, but the Indians weren't through. Averill, too, coaxed a walk from Weaver and eventually scored from third on a single by Trosky and Solters' long fly.

The Nats did get the tying runs on base against Relief Pitcher John Heving in the ninth when Al Simmons beat out a hit to Lary and Bluege walked, but this last item occurred with two out, and hope was waning away when Riddle sealed the triumph of the Injuns by popping up to the infield.

It was rather rough on Monte Weaver to lose that one. The thin man actually held the Indians to five hits while taking his beating. Except for that home run clout by Weatherly, Weaver outpitched Lloyd Brown and Heving, who gave up nine hits to the Nats.

There was nothing complicated about the run the Nats scored in the fifth inning to give Weaver a 1-0 lead after Brown had held 'em to two hits in the first four innings. Ossie Bluege simply lashed a double into leftfield with two out and Johnny Riddle, our new catcher, pumped a single into left to score him.

At that, Bluege might not have scored had Leftfielder Julius Solters come up cleanly with Riddle's ball on the first hop, but he didn't and Cleveland fans winced at the memory that the sure-fielding Joe Vosmik was traded for this fellow Solters.

But that second run the Nats scored was something to watch, all right. Ben Chapman didn't get on base in a very honorable way—he forced Monte Weaver who surprised the Nats, the Indians and himself by lashing a long single off the rightfield wall—but Chapman got around the bases something scrumptiously.

The first thing he did was to steal second base right under the nose of Pitcher Lloyd Brown with one of those copyright Chapman dashes of his. It is known to the trade as a delayed steal. Brown thought he had Chapman trapped off first base and threw to Trosky, but by this time Chapman was scrambling toward second, so fast, in fact, that he arrived there with a flourish of spikes before the surprised Trosky could get a throw to second base.

But Chapman didn't remain on second long. The first thing the Indians knew he was home—home all the way from second base on a bunt that Buddy Lewis laid down the third base line. It was a bold, mad dash to the plate by Chapman, who didn't even pause at third base while Lewis was beating Kroner's throw to first. Chapman was not out for the air this afternoon.

And so that made it 2 to 0 in favor of the Nats, who were doing nicely behind some swell pitching by Weaver. Monte was doing fairly well for himself out there on the mound. In fact, he was pitching a no-hit game for five innings, a performance marred only by four bases on balls.

But little Roy Weatherly broke the spell in the sixth with a single into rightfield. The inning began to have possibilities when Earl Averill, given a reprieve when Buddy Lewis dropped his foul pop for an error, showed his gratitude by singling to right. But Johnny Stone grabbed up the ball and, with a heave to Buddy Lewis, caught Weatherly, who attempted to take third on the hit.

The Injuns went scoreless for the sixth straight inning, when Joe Kuhel grabbed Trosky's grounder and converted it into one of those first-to-second-first double plays with Bluege's assistance.

They cut Washington's 2-to-0 lead in half in the seventh, when Odell Hale got the third hit off Weaver—a long triple against the centerfield fence. He dashed home when Kroner grounded to Bluege.

Those eighth-inning proceedings, however, were too painful to bear repetition.

Fateful Eighth.

Fleeting Moon, at $13.20, Scores Surprise Victory in Pimlico Feature

Clingendaal, Choice, Runs A Poor Race

Jim Corn Wins Opener; Miss Leannah Pays $16.40 in Fourth.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, May 6.—Fleeting Moon, owned by Ral Parr, of Baltimore, upset the dope in the Windsor Hills Purse, feature offering of the Thursday program of the Maryland Jockey Club here this afternoon.

The 3-year-old daughter of Flying Ebony-Bright Luna broke in front of the small field of five that accepted the issue in the six furlong sprint and prevailed at the end by a half-length, with A. G. Vanderbilt's Grand Play second. Third in the race was Bomar Stable's Gold Band, three lengths back of Grand Play, and only a head in front of Mrs. Emil Denemark's Prairie Dog.

Fleeting Moon, ridden by Bobby Merritt, stepped the six furlongs in 1:13 and paid $13.20 in winning her first start of the year.

Close to 8,500 attended today's racing and although showers threatened throughout the afternoon, no rain fell.

A. C. Compton's Clingendaal, the even money favorite in the Windsor Hills Purse, ran a disgraceful race and finished a badly beaten last. It appeared as though Jockey Harry Richards was cut off while attempting to go through on the rail just before leaving the backstretch and after that the Compton colorbearer refused to extend himself.

Fleeting Moon is not a nominee for the Preakness, but Gold Band, Grand Play and Clingendaal are among the lesser regarded candidates for the running of the Pimlico classic on May 15.

The Home Talent Purse, fashioned for horses foaled in Maryland, resulted in an easy victory for Jim Corn in the first race, running in the interests of J. W. Brown. Jim Corn, one that won only twice in two years, was nicely handled by Apprentice Jockey D. Scocca, a Washington, D. C., boy. Queen Govans, the favorite, was second, four lengths behind the winner and five lengths ahead of the third Zinnia. Jim Corn paid a $12.80 mutuel and was clocked for the mile and 70 yards in 1:47.

Caniento, owned by H. R. Bain, Canadian sportsman, proved a worthy favorite in the day's steeplechase event which drew a field of ten. Ridden by Jockey J. Eaby, Caniento had to be driven to the wire to take a half-length verdict from N. S. Ludington's Becteach. Eight lengths behind the second horse, Syriac took a photo finish from Flying Feathers for third money. Caniento was prominent from the start, following close to the pace of a bad-jumping Gold Sweeper. While the front runner stopped, Caniento went to the top and held sway thereafter, although Becteach closed fast. The winner ran the 2-mile course in 3:52 and paid a $7.60 mutuel.

The W. F. Hitt entry of Happy Vote and Skipped ran first and last in the fourth race, a romp of 4 furlongs for juvenile maidens. Happy Vote, with Jockey C. Rosengarten in the saddle, darted to the front at the break and gave her backers no anxious moments while winning by three and a half lengths. Heraldic was second and Travelo third in the field of seven. The entry was the favorite and paid a $3.40 mutuel. Happy Vote stepped the route in 0:48 4-5.

Pennsylvania's tourist license costs $1.60 and is good for three consecutive days. The nonresident license is the same as that required by your own State, which in the case of anglers from the District of Columbia, that requires none, makes the minimum fee of $2.60 applicable.

The age limits for residents is 16 years, but for nonresidents it is 12 years.

ACKERMAN

You can fish the trout streams of this State throughout the month of July, which gives to the confirmed addicts of the sport an additional 30 days for nothing more than the time it takes to drive the short distance across the State of Maryland.

The creel limit on all species of trout in Pennsylvania is 15 per day and over 6 inches in length. This State deserves the utmost co-operation of the angler for their stocking program and the care of their streams, so if you do appreciate this work, take heed of their wish that you fish for sport and return any fish not needed for your own or family's need.

* * * *

The restricted fishing on Spring Creek, near, Bellefonte, Pa., does not open until May 11 at 8 a. m. and closes on July 10. The same regulations, which include baroless hooks, right to keep two fish and a limit to but five days' fishing during the season on this water, will prevail again this year.

* * * *

So well has this project been received and enjoyed by anglers from all over the East that it is now commonly called fishermen's paradise. Other like projects are in the making.

During October, November and December, Pennsylvania stocked 1,440,310 fish in her streams. Of these 447,034 were legal-size brook, brown and rainbow trout.

This winter stocking is followed on heavily fished streams if needed, by others during the open season. When this is done, each stream so stocked is closed for five days to allow the fish to become accustomed to wild conditions.

Most of the trout streams of the State are located in the counties that run from north to south through the center of the State. That does not mean that there are none in the other sections, though. In fact, there is hardly a county that does not have at least several well-kept and stocked streams.

* * * *

Because the same streams are stocked each year with the same kind of trout, they will be given that way here and by counties.

Bedford County (Bedford is 148 miles from Washington over route 240 to Frederick, 15 to Gettysburg and 30 through Chambersburg)—Brook trout, Cove Creek, Yountz Creek, Sherman Valley Run, Flintstone Creek, Beaver Creek, Bobs Creek, Deaner Gap Run, Earnest Run, Potter Creek and Three Stone Creek.

Brown trout—Cumberland Valley Run, Buffalo Creek, Imlertown Run, Wills Creek, Raystown Branch and Yellow Creek. This county is noted for its many fine trout streams.

Center County (Center Hall and Bellefonte is 106 miles from Gettysburg over route 15 to Harrisburg and route 22)—Brook trout, Black Bear Run, Cold Stream, South Fork Beech Creek, Benner Run, West Branch Big Run, Cedar Creek, Cherry Run, Fields Run, Little Fishing Creek, Galbraith Gap Run, Laurel Run tributary to Sinking Creek, Laurel Run tributary to Bald Eagle Creek, Lick Run, Spruce Creek, Moshannon Creek, Mountain Branch Penns Creek, Pine Creek, Pine Run, Pleasant Gap Run, Rapid Run, Roaring Run, Little Sandy Run, Sinking Creek, Six-Mile Run, Spring Creek, Wallace Run, White Deer Creek, Winkleblack Run, Wolf Run and Yost Run.

There is no county in the whole State that can surpass the fishing to be had in Center. All the streams are heavily fished, particularly those easily reached. It is in this section also that more deer are killed each season than in any other county.

Notice Fishermen!

According to reliable information received by The Post, the blues have not started to bite at Oregon Inlet. Stories of recent "catches" have been told, but the first blue has yet to be caught on a line.

Channel bass are not biting either—only two having been caught within the past week or so.

23 Player Limit Date Is Set Back to May 23

New York, May 6 (AP).—Major league club owners have been notified by Baseball Commissioner Landis' office hat the 23-player limit will go into effect on May 23 instead of May 16, for this season only.

The later date, agreed upon in a mail vote by the clubs, was decided upon because the major league schedules opened a week later than usual this year.

Reds Win First Series in Blanking Giants, 4-0; Dodgers, Cubs, A's Win

Macks Bunch Hits To Beat Chisox, 3-1

Giants Suffer First Shutout as Grissom Yields but 5 Hits; Dodgers' 7-Run Rally Beats Pirates, 9-5; Cubs Blank Phils, 1-0; Chisox Bow, 3-1.

By the United Press.

New York, May 6.—The Chicago Cubs scored their sixth straight victory and moved into a third place tie with the New York Giants today, only 2½ games out of first place in the National League.

Charley Grimm's boys today took a 1-0 decision from the Philadelphia Phillies in a game that was halted at the end of the fifth inning because of rain.

Bill Lee gave up only one hit to score his second victory against three losses. The Cubs' run came in the fifth when Galan singled, moved to second on Frey's sacrifice and scored on Rip Collins' double.

The win enabled them to climb into a tie with the National League champions who were handed a 4-0 shutout by the Cincinnati Reds. Lee Grissom, rookie hurler, limited the Giants to five hits for the victory which gave the Reds a 2-1 margin in the three-game series. Alex Kampouris' third homer in two days in the fifth inning gave the Reds their first run—enough to win. Virgil Davis, with three singles, drove in two more runs, and Scarsella's long fly accounted for the fourth tally.

Van Mungo stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates' winning streak at four straight today when he doled out seven scattered hits and the Brooklyn Dodgers won, 9-5. The Brooklyns won the game in the fifth inning when they bunched six hits, including a homer by Lavagetto, with two Pirate errors, to score seven runs. Al Todd hit a four-bagger for Pittsburgh.

St. Louis at Boston was postponed because of wet grounds.

Eastern Wins Over Western, Guyon Says

By John R. Vosburgh

Coach Charlie Guyon yesterday willingly predicted an Eastern victory over Western today when the two schools meet in their decisive interhigh series game in Western Stadium at 3:30 p. m.

"Bring 'em on," roared the Chief without hesitation. "We can beat Western or any other team. By golly, we can beat 'em all."

Coach Cliff Moore of Western was beating no war drums, however, and conceded that Eastern has "a tough team to beat." Western's champions have won five games in seven starts; Eastern has won four in eight. Both have been beaten by Washington-Lee High twice.

Each coach is hoping to cross the other in the matter of pitching today and refused to name their starting hurlers. The Chief has Lefty Stockwell, an erratic portsider, and Rip Carver, an erratic right-hander, ready for starting duty. Coach Moore has a southpaw, Bill Bright, and his veteran right-hander, Bob Raftery, equally ready.

The probable starters are Bright and Stockwell. The latter set Tech back with a five-hit, 5-0 shutout recently but was knocked out of the box by Central, which went on to nick Carver for five hits in four innings.

Raftery beat Roosevelt with a five-hit performance and Bright set Central back with seven hits. Though Eastern has lost four games, it has beaten such formidable foes as the Georgetown Freshmen and Episcopal, as well as Tech and Central. The Lincoln Parkers have bowed to the Maryland Freshmen and Fredericksburg High.

Dickinson's Nine Bows to Terps by 12-3

Charley Weidinger, sophomore slabman for Maryland's Old Liners, walked off with the lion's share of the honors in yesterday's game with Dickinson College as he pitched and batted the Terrapins to a 12-to-3 triumph at College Park.

Weidinger blasted out a home run with one aboard in the second inning and collected two singles besides to drive in four Maryland runs. Meanwhile he was holding the Pennsylvanians safe with nine widely distributed blows.

Knocky Thomas and Mike Surgent also got two hits apiece for the Shipleymen, while Steine and Binder paced the Red Devil's batting attack.

Brescia Foe Of Gallagher In Bout Here

Local Heavy Faces the Prospect of Being Kayoed 1st Time.

For the first time in a local ring, Marty Gallagher will face the foreboding prospect of being knocked out when he faces big Jorge Brescia, the Argentine heavyweight, at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Marty has been stopped before, but not in the dim past, and never in a Washington ring. Larry Johnson, at the time a leading contender for the heavyweight crown, put the chill on Gallagher, as did Charley Retzlaff, who years ago was considered the leading candidate for the prize crown of all fistiana.

The closest Marty ever came to being knocked out here was by Tony Galento, the terrible Hatchet Man of the Ring, who mowed Gallagher to the canvas four times in ten rounds, but was unable to keep the Foggy Bottom gamester on deck for keeps. In a return bout, Gallagher trounced Galento.

The career of Gallagher has been a long one, and one that has done much to help boxing hereabouts. Born in October, 1907, Martin started fisticuffing as an amateur in 1925, winning the South Atlantic lightweight championship. His professional career began in 1926, just 11 years ago.

Since the start of his professional career, Marty has been up and down more times than Primo Carnera in an honest fight. Would come a bad fight or two and Gallagher Pfd. would crash to a new low on the fistic market. Then Marty would score one of those stunning upsets which have been one of his chief stocks in trade and Gallagher Pfd. would zoom to new heights.

Last summer, Marty reached a new high when he soundly trounced King Levinsky, climaxing a long local winning streak. His stock fell when little, fast and game Buck Everett earned a unanimous decision in Gallagher's last fight of 1936.

Joe Lipps, the Ty Ty (Ga.) heavyweight, who once was on top hereabouts, will do battle with Murray Kanner, former District amateur heavyweight titleholder, in a six-round semifinal.

Mario Caroselli, Italian middleweight champion, will appear in another six-rounder. He will oppose Hunter Crostic, of Richmond.

Corn Jump Makes Record For 12 Years

May Delivery at 131⅛; Prices Drop a Cent With Profit-Taking.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 6.—Suddenly shooting skyward 2⅜ cents a bushel late today, corn put into eclipse all high price records of the last dozen years. The apex reached by the corn market, however, $1.31⅛ for Chicago May delivery, was not maintained, values receding at the last almost a cent from the peak as a result of brisk profit-taking. The new top has not been equaled before since early in 1925, when May corn rose to $1.37⅞, which in turn was the highest as far back as 1920, when May corn brought $1.97¼.

Corn futures closed flurried, all the way from unchanged figures to 1⅝ cents higher. May $1.34¼, July $1.20½@1.20¾, September $1.09⅝@1.09¾, wheat ⅝ off to ¼ up, May $1.29½, July $1.18¾, September $1.17⅛@1.17¼, oats varying from ¼ decline to an equal gain, May 49½, and rye at ¼ setback to ⅝ advance, May $1.13¼. Provisions results were unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Bank Profits Show Sharp Increase

Indianapolis, May 6 (AP).—Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor told the Indiana Bankers Association today that there had been a rapid rise in net earnings of national banks in the last six months of 1936.

He said that 5,331 active national banks showed gross earnings for the period of $423,893,000 and expenses of $287,161,000. Net earnings from current operations totaled $136,732,000, compared to $123,402,000 for the previous six months.

"Adding to the net earnings profits on securities sold of $79,024,000 and recoveries on loans and investments and so forth, previously charged off, of $96,944,000, less losses and depreciation of $158,302,000, the net additions to profits before dividends in the period amounted to $154,398,000, which was 9.62 per cent of the par value of common and preferred capital stock, or 4.87 per cent of capital funds," O'Connor said.

U.S. Oil Exports Likely to Pass $300,000,000

Foreign Petroleum Sales Are Exceeded Only by Raw Cotton.

New York, May 6.—Value of petroleum products exported from the United States during 1937 is likely to exceed $300,000,000, according to an estimate today by World Petroleum. This estimate is based on an increase in the average monthly value of petroleum exports from $20,759,000 in 1935 to $21,759,000 in 1936 and a further increase in the average monthly value during the first three months of 1937 to $22,901,100.

As the seasonal cycle of petroleum exports shows a rising trend throughout the first part of the year and is at its lowest point in February, it may be assumed that the year's value of exports will be well above four times the value of the first three months' exports.

Petroleum is the second most valuable classification of exports from the United States, being exceeded only by unmanufactured cotton, exports of which were valued at $361,043,000 in 1936. During 1935 the total value of petroleum and products exported from the United States was $249,103,626; during 1936, the total value of petroleum exports was $260,845,311. In consideration of the above factors, World Petroleum estimates that the value of oil exports will exceed $300,000,000 in 1937.

Curb Prices Firm In Light Trading

New York, May 6 (AP).—A few metals and industrial specialties scored wide gains today in a quiet curb market session. Dealings fell to the lowest level since last August at 193,000 shares compared with 197,000 yesterday.

Many leaders held within narrow fractions of Wednesday's final prices, but more action was supplied by Aluminum Co. of America, up 5 at 134; Pan American Airways at 69, up 4; Lake Shore Mines at 52¼, up 1¾, and Newmont 111¼, up 1¼.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass had few takers, sliding off 4¾ on a few trades. American Gas & Electric and a few other utility leaders dipped fractionally.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Dull With Closing Rally in Rails; Bonds Are Steady.

New York, May 6.—In a turnover of around three-quarters of a million shares the stock market moved irregularly. Closing prices were near the best with mild recovery in rail, steel, motor, copper and oil shares, but early movements were downward. Bonds were fairly steady. July wheat closed ⅝ of a cent lower at 118¾ cents a bushel.

Closing for the religious holiday of continental markets added to the dullness on this side, and the settlement day at London plus the distractions of the coronation preparations reduced interest. Trading was so slack that price movements did not mean much. The tendency was to credit declines to the mere absence of buying interest rather than to any belief in lower prices, and to assume that most of the higher prices were paid because prospective sellers were otherwise engaged.

Price advances were more numerous in the first hour's trading than in the middle period, when the market looked uncertain, but a few popular stocks recovered a bit in the last hour. The list included Santa Fe, which has shown unwonted strength in the last few days; New York Central and Steel, but the majority continued to look heavy.

In the strong group Celanese was outstanding, and it was one of the most active stocks. Another fast mover was Chicago Pneumatic Tool. Weakness was pronounced in the silver stocks, which fell 1 to 3 points. Federal Mining dropped 15 points. United States Rubber and McGraw Hill also dropped abruptly. General Railway Signal moved erratically. Telephone relaxed.

Better Feeling.

On most counts greater calm prevailed in the financial district. Reports from London indicated that the fortnightly settlement had gone off without difficulty, that is to say, the majority of stock traders were able to pay for their securities or to secure loans to carry them, something which a week ago it had been feared many would not be able to do. On the business side also the tide turned on stories of cancellation of orders and top heavy inventories. Bankers who have investigated the numerous reports of order canceling since the sharp break in commodity prices say that the stories have been much exaggerated. While in some lines the flood of new ordering has subsided, old orders placed have been allowed to stand.

Quiet reigned in the money markets. The shrinkage in bank excess reserves seems to have been checked at around the $100,000,000 figure by the fortuitous transfers of money back from the interior yesterday, together with a return of some currency from circulation, with lower reserve requirements produced by a decrease in deposits. At the opening of business this morning excess reserves totaled $110,000,000, and while a Treasury call was to take $18,000,000 out of the market here today, it was believed that the withdrawal might be offset by further transfers to this city.

Reserve Buying.

Since the Government securities market has not needed central bank support in the week ended Wednesday it is assumed that the bank statement issued this evening will disclose that no support was given. Reserve bank buying of Treasury issues is supposed to be in direct relation to the amount of support needed to prevent a sudden and sharp decline. Since nobody can foretell the course of the market, it is equally impossible to forecast how much Government securities the central banks will take on. They want to do some selling on bulges, rather than continue to freeze up money, but, as a bank officer observed recently, the market may be healthy, but it is still thin.

Bank of England.

The rise in Bank of England circulation to a new high record as of May 5 suggests that the coronation period may bring even fancier totals for outstanding notes. If the bank follows its previous policy of buying gold in proportion to the expansion in its notes, London may absorb considerable amounts, the equalization fund buying for resale to the bank.

Misnomer.

What the Bank of England does is, in effect, much the same as that which our central bank does with regard to gold taken in, but the motor is in the other end. When business, hoarding, speculation or any other influence forces the Bank of England to pay out more currency, gold is acquired to keep up the reserve ratio. On this side the receipts of gold, which is more or less automatic, induce the Federal Reserve to deposit money with the banks. With the new technique of gold sterilization, new money circulation or put on deposit is taken back when the Treasury sells discount notes to the banks, taking cash from them, or when the Treasury draws down its deposits with the private banks. If the banks subsequently sell the Treasury obligations to the central banks they gain reserves and gold sterilization is a misnomer. If they sell them to the public they reduce their deposit liabilities and gain cash.

New Names.

Messrs. Young, Kolbe & Kirby, the purchasers of most of Alleghany from the Ball holdings of Mid-America, confirmed to the press last night that which had been more or less taken for granted all along, namely, the dissolution of some of the holding companies. It is suggested by the new controllers that Chesapeake Corporation will be disposed of, although the method seems to be a bit hazy. Eventually, it is assumed, control of the operating railroad properties will be exercised in a way to attempt actual consolidation, perhaps into an Eastern and a Western system, which also seemed to be the original goal of the Van Sweringen brothers along with the primary object of making some money.

Keeping It Secret.

With an investigation beginning today by the Wheeler committee into the new deal whereby George Ball passed up the former Van Sweringen holdings to new interests, nothing for a while likely will be done. The position in a number of ways strongly resembles that formerly occupied by the Van Sweringens. What strikes the press inquirer at the moment is the insistence placed by the new owners upon the complexity of the problems involved, the number of "ifs" and "buts" and the general air of uncertainty. Yet it scarcely is to be assumed that the new purchasers would risk millions unless they had decidedly clear-cut and definite ideas of just what they intended and would be able to do with the properties after they had them. Those ideas are yet to be divulged, and probably won't be for a long time.

Retail Sales.

Retail sales in April on the basis of early returns showed small declines from the preceding month and a year ago, which may be attributed chiefly to Easter buying in March this year and in the early weeks of April, 1936. The first ten fixed-price chain stores to report, according to The Sun's compilation, showed a decline of 4.9 per cent under April last year and were down 10.6 per cent from the sales in March. Last month's drop was the first time this year that sales were lower than the previous period or the same month of 1936. Nine of the group in the first four months had an increase of 8.5 per cent above the preceding year.

In spite of this increase, stocks of cotton cloth on hand declined during the last year.

High Building Cost Not Likely To Check Rise

Total for Last Year 113% Above 1933 but 60% Under 1928.

New York, May 6.—In a broad survey of the building industry, the Brookmire Economic Service finds that, while building costs are rising, they do not seem likely to prevent expanding activity other than temporarily. The high cost of labor should stimulate a large measure of prefabrication under mass production measures, and this, the survey points out, should be of particular benefit to manufacturers whose products lend themselves readily to this process.

Pointing out that hesitation in construction can result from excessive costs and Government acts to prevent business expansion from developing to unwholesome boom proportions, the survey states that it would be a fair prediction that any such act would be of short duration and that the longer-run outlook for construction points to a greater expansion.

While complete figures are not available, a fair estimate of construction in 1936 totals $2,675,000,000. This figure is 113 per cent larger than in the low year of 1933, but is still 60 per cent smaller than the high year of 1928. Taking the statistics of the F. W. Dodge Corporation as typical, the survey finds that construction of apartments and hotels was 325 per cent greater last year than in 1933.

Dwellings and other residential construction was 314 per cent greater. In the nonresidential field, the greatest gain during 1936 over 1933 occurred in the construction of factories, the gain being 355 per cent. Commercial buildings showed a gain of 150 per cent, public and semipublic buildings a gain of 186 per cent, public works 43 per cent and public utilities 172 per cent. So far in 1937, the rate of construction has run well ahead of the corresponding period of 1936 in private types of buildings, particularly residential and factory.

WPA Fund Cut And Inquiry in Spending Urged

Rep. Kloeb Would Limit Summer Work; King Asks Abolition.

Congressional demands for investigation, trimming and even abandonment of WPA yesterday mingled with requests for doubled relief appropriations, as the House Appropriations Committee concluded hearings on the President's $1,500,000,000 relief estimates.

The committee, seeking means of lopping $500,000,000 off the estimates, heard a recommendation that WPA activities be abandoned in 2,000 rural counties between May 1 and December 1 every year. It was made by Representative Frank L. Kloeb (Democrat), of Ohio, following a survey of his own rural districts.

At the other end of the Capitol, Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, proposed a Senate investigation of WPA, claiming "enormous expenditures," "disproportionate" overhead and salaries, and a lack of "adequate information." He proposed appointment of three Senators to make the inquiry.

King Seeks Abolition.

King also introduced a resolution for abolition of WPA, and a Congressional relief appropriation of only $850,000,000, to be distributed by the President through the Governors of the States, upon the basis of the number of needy and the ability of a State to care for its own relief cases.

Still favoring a $500,000,000 reduction in WPA appropriations, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, wound up hearings by his deficiency sub-committee, but agreed to receive additional statistics by WPA, and a statement by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York on Monday.

Meantime, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins struck back at a press conference.

"If Congress reduces the appropriation to $1,000,000,000," said Hopkins, "and the Resettlement Administration and other agencies obtain money from the fund, WPA rolls would be reduced to less than 1,000,000."

For the week ended May 1, there were 2,059,798 on WPA relief rolls. The 1938 estimate would care for a monthly average of 1,720,000.

Hopkins also hit at the proposal of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to require States and subdivisions to pay 50 per cent of the cost, where they are able.

"I don't know of a city in the country which would be able to put up 50 per cent," said Hopkins.

Others Urge Increase.

Leading advocates of an increase in relief outlays appearing before the committee yesterday were Representative Gerald J. Boileau, Wisconsin Progressive, and David Lasser, of the Workers' Alliance. Boileau asked a $3,000,000,000 relief appropriation to provide work relief for 3,000,000 together with a 20 per cent increase in salary.

Kloeb was the only witness favoring a reduction in outlays. He said he had consulted town and county officers in his rural districts, and on the basis of their statements, WPA could be shut down in rural communities for the seven months between spring and winter.

In the Senate, Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, introduced his bill to consolidate the Federal Home Loan Board, the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Owners Loan Corporation, at a saving of $24,500,000. A new agency—the Federal Home Credit Administration—would be substituted for the other three. Byrd's plan is in line with recommendations made by the Brookings Institution to his Senate Reorganization Committee.

Thomas Heath, 85, Succumbs in D. C.

Thomas Howell Heath, 85, a retired newspaper man, died last night at the home of his son, Harry G. Heath, 630 Seventh street northwest.

He had been a resident of Washington for 58 years. He was a native of Petersburg, Va., and was a son of Oswald Drewery Heath, an officer in the Confederate Army.

As a boy, Mr. Heath was a witness of the Crater Battle and saw many adventures in skirmishes. In one such attack he was wounded by a stray bullet. His first writing was of his adventures and later of short stories against the Civil War background.

Mr. Heath is survived by his son, a granddaughter, Miss Nellie Heath, and a grandson, William D. Heath, the latter son of the late Thomas Ransdell Heath.

Eccentric Widow Accuses Nephew In $220,000 Theft

Denver, May 6 (AP).—Theft of more than $220,000 in cash and bonds from an eccentric Denver widow, who cached most of her fortune in her basement, was disclosed today by U. S. District Attorney Thomas F. Morrissey.

Simultaneously, he announced the arrest on the high seas of J. Turner Watson, 25, trusted nephew of Mrs. Martha Blous, 65, on a warrant charging he had fled the country with the money.

Morrissey said Watson was accused of taking $133,000 cash from its casual hiding place in a bucket while Mrs. Blous was in New York, that he ransacked her safety deposit vault of $86,000 bonds and took $3,700 from her savings account.

Watson flew to New York and was arrested near the Panama Canal on a clew furnished by blonde Pauline Swanson, Hollywood film magazine employe he met on the ship, Morrissey explained.

Watson is held aboard the Santa Maria, which will dock Sunday at Los Angeles. He will be returned here.

Raskob Dealt InMillions,Paid No Tax in 1930

Industrialist Claims Net Loss for Year in Federal 'Wash Sales' Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—John J. Raskob, multimillionaire industrialist, paid no income tax for 1930 although his stock transactions for the year totals many millions of dollars, it was revealed today in the income-tax hearing against his business associate, Pierre S. du Pont.

Despite protests of Col. Joseph Hartfield, Raskob's attorney, Tax Commissioner Richard Disney allowed reporters to see Raskob's 1930 tax return after it was introduced by Government counsel.

After a brief consultation with attorneys, Disney told reporters:

"The public has a legitimate right to news. I am not going to bar you from seeing the return."

$728,400 in Two Years.

Separate sheets attached to the return showed the millions of dollars involved in stock transactions. Raskob listed a net loss of $448,925 in sales of stocks and bonds. A profit of $728,400 was shown for two transactions in Warner Brothers Pictures Corporation.

Raskob listed a total income for 1930 of $799,181.94 and deductions of $867,263.54.

The return was brought into the case as Government counsel were weaving through a maze of financial transactions between du Pont and Raskob in an attempt to establish deficiencies in their 1929 taxes. The Government is suing to collect $1,800,000.

Raskob, ina light-brown suit, sat quietly talking with his tax counsel, Walter B. Orr, when the return was introduced and apparently paid no attention to theefforts of his attorney to prevent its publication. Raskob and Du Pont have obtained a severance of the case against them, and at the present time the action is being taken only against Du Pont.

Call Sales Legitimate.

Notations on Raskob's tax return served as a final link in establishing profits taken from two transactions between Raskob and Du Pont. Their counsel have admitted the existence of these transactions from the begininng of the trial. They contend the sales were legitimate and that the losses, established by comparison with peak values before the 1929 panic,, were legally deductible.

Mason B. Leming, chief of Government counsel, announced his intention of proving the sales were fictitious "wash" sales, entered into for the sole purpose of establishing these losses and accompanied by an illegal agreement to repurchase in 1930.

In his return, Raskob listed salaries of $10,000 each from E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and General Motors Corporation, and $4,115.56 in directors' fees from the latter organization. The return also showed $799,416 dividends on stocks and $36,867 interest in bonds.

Under deductions, Raskob listed interest paid out as $595,444 and taxes as $271,800, including an item of $269,725.64 to the State of Delaware.

6Men,2Women Seized in Raid By Vice Squad

Store, Home Raided Together; Arrests Are Made on Gaming Charges.

Six men and two women were seized by vice squad police yesterday when a grocery store and a private home were raided simultaneously.

Led by Sergt. George C. Deyoe, the raiders entered a grocery store in the 1700 block Seventeenth street northwest and a home in the 1600 block R street northwest.

Three men were charged with setting up a gaming table in connection with the two places when police investigation is alleged to have disclosed they were operated together.

Those charged gave their names as Fred J. Neam, 39, 1700 block Seventeenth street northwest; Wadie Aed, 40, 1400 block Monroe street northwest, and Arthur Bruscino, 45, 1600 R street northwest.

The others booked for investigation and released were Laura May Strickland, 36, 1400 block R street northwest; Elfrida Lundrine, 53, 2100 block Nineteenth street northwest; Guy Wilson, 40, 300 block Second street northeast; Virgil Galotta, 29, 1400 block N street northwest, and Homer B. Miller, 61, 1700 block P street northwest.

The raid was engineered by Capt. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, who said several race bets and "numbers" plays were made in the grocery store and that the bets were turned in to the R street establishment.

A quantity of race slips, a telephone and a "numbers" dream book were seized.

Meanwhile, three other men were charged with setting up a gaming table when Detective J. J. Comiskey arrested them on the street. Comiskey was armed with warrants not served in previous gambling raids. The men were released on bond.

They expressed hope, however, that Kentucky officials would use the committee's findings as the basis for "a top to bottom clean-up" of the Harlan County law enforcement system.
